From the Biblical Recorder.

DEAR BRO. MEREDITH:—It is known to many in various parts of our country, that a few years ago, I was standing in the front rank of opposition to the plans designed for the spread of the gospel, and for the improvement of the moral, intellectual, and physical condition of mankind. It is like wise known to a number of that many, that I now am considered a warm friend to those plans. And having had it suggested to me by President Wait of Wake Forest College, that it would probably be productive of good to lay before the public through the Recorder, the reasons which have brought about this change in my views; and as it may be gratifying to others as well as brother Wait, and under providence, may result in adding a little strength to the cause which is deemed so well worthy of all the aid it can receive, I proceed to give them in detail.

I will begin with naming the causes which led me to a patient examination of the mission question.

In the summer of 1835, I was consulted by bro. Joshua Lawrence, to know whether I would edit a religious newspaper, to be printed in Tarborough, N. C. I consented to do so; but not until I had stated to Elder L. that I should claim the full exercise of editorial discretion; that, whatever I should judge adapted to promote the Old School cause and the cause of truth generally, might be published, but all else I should suppress; that, if necessary, I should trim the communications of our correspondents; and I should not hesitate to apply the pruning knife to his writings, sooner than to any other's. This course appeared at the time to receive his cordial approbation. But the first acts of omission upon his writing were met with complaints from him and censures against the editor.

Early in the third volume of the Prim. Bab. we published Elder L's "Baptist Associations proved from Scripture." Shortly thereafter we received a communication, in which the writer proposed to show the insufficiency of Elder L's proofs. I was about to publish the communication, when Elder L. expressed his high displeasure thereat, pronounced the correspondent unworthy of his confidence as an Old School baptist; and used language which strongly questioned the fidelity of the editor.

Towards the close of that volume, Elder L. gave us his first of two articles on "The two seeds." In the front of the fourth volume, stand his second. The sentiments contained in those two articles met a dissent in and some strictures from "The Signs of the Times." For this, he denied the editor of the Signs an identity with Old S. Baptists, and rejected him from their confidence.

These things led me to regard with a more inquisitive eye, the prevailing spirit of our correspondents. And, although I had, in the first vol. first num. Prim. Bab. requested all writers for the paper to abstain from abuse and ridicule of every kind, as ill comporting with the design of this [Prim. Bab.] paper; and although it was proclaimed in the very introduction that the Prim. Bab. was "principally intended to defend the Old School United Baptists from the many aspersions cast upon them by deuded persons professing their own faith; and, although I was to sit out with the universal and impartial pruning knife; yet, borne along by the strong current of opposite views and sentiments, I had at length unintentionally and unexpectedly found myself at the head; (or rather at the foot) of a paper which was celebrated for assailing and abusing other principles and other men.

I felt the awkwardness of my situation, and that of the denomination to which I belonged. To a discerning public we must have appeared in the outset, either to have been wanting in purpose, or else in firmness to carry it out. I still thought, however, that my brethren aimed well, and were injudicious and indiscreet only in their mode of opposition. But I could not resist the force of this truth, that good aims cannot justify unlawful means.

The facts added to those named in my valedictory, fixed my determination to be no longer editor, after the 3d vol. was closed. They led me, also to examine more closely into the state of our Ministry. The result of this investigation was, a conviction that we had departed, in several, important points from gospel grounds. As the correspondents of the Prim. were unwilling to be contradicted, and to have their opinions thoroughly investigated, under the pretext that all controversy with each other must be avoided, so the Ministry. If one of our ministers contradicted or differed with us, we straight regarded him with jealousy and suspicion. What we ourselves did in opposition to other denominations we viewed in the light of sacred duty; what others said against us, we did not hesitate to pronounce persecution.

I found that we had abandoned the idea of fixing the standard of our practice by the precepts and commandments of the New Testament. We considered human nature too depraved for Christians to be capable of living exactly and precisely up to the requirements of the gospel. The idea prevailed generally that the scriptures abate considerably of their strictness towards saints, and "taking the will for the deed," do not expect them to show in their lives a full compliance with the commandments.

From this impression, we went a step farther. We attached increased importance to faith or belief, and less to works; until almost all practical religion or good works seemed to us like self-righteousness. We became afraid to preach up and insist upon practical piety; and our discourses or sermons became almost exclusively doctrinal. This step was followed by another. Those who attached great importance to works, and preached their necessity, were thought by us to be false professors and self-righteous hypocrites.

We stopped not here. We opened an offensive warfare upon all other denominations, and that from the pulpit, which was carried to such length that half our sermons, many a time, was taken up in censuring them. A censorious spirit by this means pervaded our whole sect. And when all the rest, of course, condemned such a practice, we exclaimed that all other denominations were opposed to the O. S. Baptists. We claimed their objections as evidence of our orthodoxy. We published, from the pulpit that all christendom was against us, in order to enlist public sympathy.

From being always doctrinal preaching, we came to dwell, chiefly on the decrees of God. The idea of election was made indispensable. If a professor did not hold that doctrine we did not scruple his gracious state. We preached impenitence and unliking in the heart as if their salvation depended on that single point. We appeared to preach of election, but we did not care whether it was true or not. It was the will and the power of God. As if we had not gone far enough yet, we tacitly contended for perfection in our ministry. It was declared as our belief, that God never sent a man to preach the truth, and then sent another to contradict him; that any who contradicted the truth was not sent of God. The consequence of which is, a man must be perfect in doctrine, or not divinely sent.

We strongly intimated that we preached by inspiration. Our objections were pointed and strong not only against reading sermons, but also against notes to assist the memory in preaching. We did not wish our congregations to think we had meditated upon our subject; nor that we preached by chance. And as there is but one way that of inspiration, we must have left them to infer that we preached in that way. Hence it was common to say, we would preach from just such texts as God gave us, and no other. We wished to impress men with the belief, that learned ministers preached from their knowledge of books; but we had a surer guide.

Finding the Ministry in this condition, I was naturally led to inquire more patiently into that of the church. The latter I found to be as deplorable as the former. Long accustomed to hear works ridiculed, she had become afraid of them, lest she should be liable to the charge of being hypocritical. She thus had a fair opportunity of indulging in sloth, lukewarmness, sleep, and every thing else, that shrinks from the cross.

She had not been reproved for unbecomings, nor admonished for disobedience, until she would not bear reproval or admonition. She would not tolerate a Minister who would describe her true state to her. She was prepared to hear him speak only of her purity, her orthodoxy, and steadfastness.

She had not been reminded of the unhallowed passions, tempers, and desires, which rage within, and war against faithfulness and piety, until she had almost forgotten to expect their attack; or to search within for them. This maxim seems to have obtained in her: Sound in belief, sound in christianity.

covetousness prevailed; little communion and fellowship of the spirit, little enjoyment in fellowship with the Father and with his Son Jesus Christ, was felt or sought. They saw their condition was bad yet did not consider it their duty to attempt to alter it.

Among other vices, intemperance in the use of ardent spirits held a powerful sway. There were few churches in my knowledge but that were infested with this evil. And what was worse, where members of the churches had from long habit, nearly or quite lost the power of governing themselves, and needed a brotherly hand gently to draw them back, they were still encouraged and incited both by the example and arguments of their ministers. We were become a reproach and a by-word to the world. Mine eye affected my heart; and I mourned, for Zion.

I believed something must be done, and should be done, and I determined to act though I should act alone. In 1840, my Association, the Centennial, requested me to write a circular letter to attach to her minutes for 1841. In discharging this duty, I wrote on practical piety, and dwelt at some length on temperance. This circular advocated a total abstinence in all cases, provided spirits might be used as a medicine only. The circular passed and was printed, but proved to be very unsatisfactory to the churches, and the next circular was actually designed as an answer, and warmly advocated the use of spirituous liquors. It was, however, rejected by the examining committee and was not printed. Subsequently to this, a word was carefully mingled with pulpits discourse to justify and encourage the use.

I determined to make one more effort, though it should cost me the loss of fellowship; but I hoped I should not lose that. I could not help persuading myself that I could approach my brethren in so humble and affectionate a manner as not to merit their displeasure, if I did not gain their approbation. I therefore wrote and had published at the cost of $25, "An Essay on the use of spirituous liquors, &c." and distributed it gratuitously.

It is true, I was afraid I should lose my brethren. I knew the rage of appetite, when upheld by the power of habit, is also the deep and abiding prejudice. Societies; and that the uncomfortable and relaxed state of our Ministry, and of our churches, weakened in my mind, the claims of our opposition; and my reflections on the necessity and benefits of the temperance cause, led me to question the righteousness of our cause, and to admit the question of Missions to candid hearing, when I reasoned with myself in the following manner: Is it right or is it wrong, for other nations, and the destitute parts of our own country, to hear the gospel, and read the Bible? I could not say it is wrong. For though the light of the gospel may be now extinct in many places where once it shone, yet we have nothing to show that it shall not be rekindled in the same places. Indeed we are assured it shall be the case to some extent; for Jerusalem, whose house is now left desolate, shall yet say, "blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." And yet if I should decide that it is right, I saw plainly I should lose considerable, if not the whole ground I occupied. Recollecting we had all along admitted it to be right, and seeing no cause to dispute it now, unless it was impliedly prohibited in the commission, "go ye unto all the world, &c." or rather in the fulfillment of this commission, I turned to examine it after this method:

Was the commission carried out to its full extent during the day of inspiration, or during the Apostles' life-time, or not? If it was, then under what authority does any man now preach? If that commission ceased with the Apostles; then we have no right or authority to preach under it. But if the obligation of that charge rests in all its force upon us, then the space still defined into all the world; and answered, it is right, and proceeded to consider.

Will other nations ever receive the gospel in any way, except either through miracles, or by the reading of the Bible and preaching? It is not expected they will receive it through any miraculous means. For miracles, though they began the present dispensation, have long ago ceased, (unless we regard conversion as a miracle, but no one who understands the use of words will confound that term with miracles.) Again, if miracles were to precede the gospel, or accompany it to every nation, they would have come with it to America. The gospel, then, must go through the Bible and preaching. This is the only way in which it has spread for eighteen hundred years.

The gospel dispensation, therefore, is going on without miracle or inspired men. It spreads its limits to all nations, and stretches out its duration always even to the end of the world. But

Is it God's time to send the gospel to heathen lands, or not?

The scriptures are silent, except they answer, Go. In vain shall we expect them to specify that it is now God's time for America, but not for Asia and Africa.—In vain shall we search for the passages that tell us the difference between his time for North Carolina and for Burmah. The gospel dispensation rings in every candid ear, and sinks to every honest heart. Behold NOW is the accepted time; Behold NOW is the day of salvation. Moreover, I felt it incumbent upon us who denied its being God's time, and how they might know it. Lastly,

Are the plans now in operation for spreading the gospel, justifiable means according to the scriptures?

If the gospel were to be spread by miracles only, then were the missionary institutions unjustifiable. They would then be substituting human agency for divine. But as it is to be spread by simple methods and human instrumentalities; as it is to go by printing and preaching; by walking, riding, and sailing; by eating, drinking, and praying; by crossing rivers, mountains, seas and lakes; by buying food and raiment, and means for travelling; by singing, praying, preaching, and hearing; by building meeting-houses, and buying ground for that purpose; by communicating to him that teacheth in all good things; by allowing the minister of the gospel a living, and giving the laborer his hire; and seeing that these means were in requisition in apostolic times, they are not only justifiable but commendable; nay, more, they are obligatory. I yielded my hearty assent to missions, as heaven's instruments, and ceased my opposition.

ADDRESS OF THE WASHINGTON DEMOCRATIC ASSOCIATION TO THE DEMOCRACY OF THE UNITED STATES.

Brother, your principles are in danger. The truth is with you; the people are with you; the hopes of mankind are with you; and yet you are in the most imminent danger of defeat. Your peril is not in the strength of your adversary, the soundness of his principles, or the popularity of his measures; but in the divisions of your own political leaders.

A new element has been introduced into the contest for the presidency, which, without the utmost discretion and forbearance on the part of all true friends of their country and of sound principles, threatens, by its excitement, to divide and prostrate the party on whose union and success all that is precious in republican government depends.

Under these circumstances, it becomes every considerate democrat to lift his voice in favor of peace; to pour oil on the troubled waters; to implore those who are rushing into fraternal strife, to stop and reflect; to check as far as may be, by his voice and by his example, mutual extermination and recriminations; to recall the wandering eye of the faithful democrat to the standard around which we have so often fought, and warm up his heart with love for those principles, which, under Jefferson and Jackson, entered into the battle cry, and were the basis of victory.

The question upon which the democratic party is in danger of division, is the immediate annexation of Texas to the United States. The evils of this measure are doubtless exaggerated on the one side, and its benefits magnified on the other. It is the peculiar aptitude of the American people to run into extremes on matters of opinion. Not unconscious ourselves of the infirmity which misleads others, we shall endeavor to give you, without excitement or exaggeration, a brief sketch of the views we take of this important question and its connection with the presidential election, happy if perchance we can say ought to maintain harmony in the democratic party, and induce them, with united front, march on to victory.

We are not among those who have apprehensions of danger from the extension of our territory, so long as our government is administered according to the true spirit of the constitution. There are a few great principles in which all mankind, whatever may be the diversity of local circumstances and institutions, have an equal interest. One of them is peace; another is reciprocal free trade; another the inviolability of contracts. The reign of peace extends itself over all States which gather under the shelter of our constitution; between those States, trade is reciprocal and free; and none of them are at liberty to pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts. It is only these and similar general interests that our constitution embraces—interests equally important to the human family at the temperate zone or the frigid, at the equator and the poles, leaving every thing local to be regulated by local legislation.

Our constitution, administered in its purity, is, like heaven's canopy, a shield beneath which man may work out his own happiness, gather the means of subsistence, surround himself with every comfort, improve his mind, correct his errors, reform his institutions, and advance his race to the highest degree of knowledge and virtue which a short life and finite mind will allow him to attain.

Why should we be so narrow-minded and selfish as not to be willing to extend this blessed shield over as large a portion of the human family as we can, without danger to ourselves? We readily perceive why those who wish to build up aristocracies and systems of nobility on this continent, the members of which are to be fed, and clothed, and housed, by taxing the industry of the laboring millions, should be opposed to an extension of territory. We well understand why such men prefer that Texas should remain a separate republic on the South, & Canada become one on the North. Each, with the United States, must then have her separate army and navy; the number to be supported by the toil of the farmer and mechanic must be greatly increased; and ever and anon man's rulers and tormentors—who know no glory but that of the battle-field, and consider the mass of their race as created only to be worked and butchered to gratify their appetites and ambition—will employ the people of the three countries in ravaging each other's territories, and taking each other's lives. In the train of numerous standing armies, and to glean up from the fields what the desolations of war have left must come, grinding taxation, corvées, and crowns. If there be any among us who would see their sons torn from them to kill their fellow-men in Texas or Canada, and the fruits of their labor consumed in taxes to feed and clothe them in the operation, and pamper chiefs and lords—military and civil, in peace and war—rather than the people of those countries should live with us in peace and brotherhood, such men should, under all circumstances, be opposed to the extension of our territory. Who will say that a league among the nations which should secure the perpetual reign of "peace on earth," would not be a blessing to every nation? Who will maintain, that, if it secure "good will among men" by a perfect freedom of intercourse, the blessing would not be greatly enhanced? Such a league to the nations over which it extends its protection, is our constitution. It does not make different States, one people, except so far as their interests are one. It gives peace; it gives reciprocal free trade; and where are the States whose interests are not one in those respects? Nor are we among those who think danger to our constitution and Union will spring out of an extension of territory and a multiplication of States. Would man, if he could, pull down the canopy of heaven which secures him life and all its enjoyments? As little would he desire to cast off the dominion of those principles which our constitution embodies, when he has once realized the blessing they shower upon his race. Fanatics will occasionally arise, who would, as it were, in their bigotry and fury, tear the sun from the firmament because he shines on the pagan and the infidel; on the master & his slave; but those tempests, partial local in their character, will be unavailing to shake the noble structure in which the best interests of our race find shelter, and their best hopes encouragement.

To the angel of our republic we therefore say, onward! onward! Plant our standard and extend our constitution whenever our language, laws, and customs extend on the North American continent. From the Atlantic to the Pacific—from the isthmus of Darien to the frozen sea of the north—as the English race, with their intermixtures, prevail,—let the star-spangled banner wave—not as the beacon of desolating war, but as the sign of "peace on earth, and good will to men." To compare our peaceful acquisitions of territory to the conquest of ancient warriors, is unjust. They left behind them ruined cities, desolated fields, and depopulated countries. In our conquering footsteps, cities spring up as if by magic, cultivated fields extend around us almost as rapidly as the shadows of the clouds pass over them, and unnumbered swarms of people, full of life and hope, penetrate the forest and overspread the prairies, whose weapons of war are the axe and the plough. Nor shall the ruins of any Babylon or Palmyra, Palenque or Uxmal smoke and bleach in the track of murderous war within the compass of our dominions, however extended; until our constitution has been perverted from its original purposes, and the best hopes of mankind sacrificed to the designs of avarice or ambition, which make deluded man their instruments and their victims.

But there is a subject which, with every true democrat, ought to be considered far more important than the extension of our territory. It is the preservation of the constitution itself, and the predominance of democratic principles in the administration of our government. What can we consider what we cannot govern, what we consider have on principles which we consider essential to the preservation of liberty, or the advancement of man? If, while reaching after other territories, we are stripped of all that is precious in our government at home—all that would make their annexation a blessing to them or to ourselves,—we shall lose the substance while grasping the shadow. It is not under the dominion of a national bank that we wish to bring the people of Texas. There is no philosophy in the movement which would make them virtually the subjects of an empire, the products of whose sunny fields are to be forever taxed to support an aristocracy in the north, whether moneyed or titled. If, through latitudinous construction or direct usurpation, our States are to become, virtually, a consolidated empire, within which a congress or a monarch is to regulate all their local concerns, we do not desire any other portion of the human family to share with us in such a calamity. Rather, if such principles are to prevail in the administration, would we see Texas remain separate and independent, that there may be asylum for us or our children to fly to, when usurpation and oppression have extinguished all "hope in the land of the free and the home of the brave."

If the time shall ever come, when the corruptions of a national bank shall deprave a whole country, as thoroughly as they have done a great city, once celebrated for its order and morality—when riot, with its fire-brand, shall rave through the land, and murder strike down its victims with impunity in open day—when libraries of sacred knowledge shall every where become bonfires for bigots mobs—when, from the blackened and crumbling walls of burnt churches, "THE LORD SEETH" shall be the only voice of consolation to houseless and starving thousands, who came to our shores to find protection of life, liberty, property, and religious worship;—when that disastrous day shall come—if come it must—we devoutly pray that there may be one spot on this earth and this continent, even if it be the region of the "lone star" where hope may again kindle her fires, and liberty erect her standards.

It is not our purpose to discuss the expediency of the immediate annexation of Texas to the United States. Nor will we consider the justice or policy of making that question a test in the coming presidential election. The first question is before the American people, by whom it will be discussed, considered, and decided. The second will present itself to the national democratic convention, who will undoubtedly give true expression to the wishes of the democracy of the nation, as far as they are known. Be their decision what it may, either as to the test or the candidates, we pledge ourselves to abide by it, and to rally around the democratic banner, determined to bear it on to victory. Nor will we stop to inquire whether it have upon it a star more or a star less, or whether it be borne by an old soldier, or a young one.

We will gather to it as the banner of Jefferson and of Jackson; of liberty and of our country; we will plant it in triumph upon the sea coasts and our mountains; upon our rivers and our prairies; and then, from Texas and Oregon—perchance in fullness of time from Canada and Mexico—we will spangle it all over with stars, until it shall become, like the clusters of the milky way, a cloud of light, beneath which half mankind, living in peace and happiness, shall admire and rejoice.

Will not our brother democrats every where make up their minds to resolve, in this spirit, the decisions and nominations of the Baltimore convention? It is the only GUARANTY of victory; ONLY HOPE.

Resolved, That, in our opinion, the first object of every true democrat, in the approaching presidential election, should be the ascendancy of democratic principles in the administration of our government.

Resolved, That the evils apprehended on the one side from the annexation of Texas to the United States, and the mischief on the other from a delay of that measure, sink into insignificance when compared with the dangers which will inevitably spring from the election of Henry Clay to the presidency, and entangling upon our constitution the principles now openly avowed by the whig party.

Resolved, That, in our opinion, the only way to prevent so great a calamity, is a cordial union of the democratic party in support of the nominees of the approaching Baltimore convention for President and Vice President.

Resolved, That we deprecate all crimination and recrimination, and all imputation of improper motives on the one side or the other, and earnestly advise our friends who are involved in the discussion of this subject, to that forbearance and charity which alone can lead to good feeling and united action in this crisis of our public affairs.

Resolved, That all the democratic papers in the United States be requested to publish this address.

At an adjourned meeting of the association, held on the evening of the 16th May, 1844, the foregoing address, having been read and discussed, was unanimously adopted.

AMOS KENDALL, President.
JOHN E. NORRIS, Recording Sec'y.

Drunkenness.—The New York Aurora tells of this State, that a drunkard can be divorced, if his wife so chooses, and that his property can be placed under the control of trustees, and managed for the exclusive benefit of his family. We imagine this decision will add to the list of total abstinents considerably, and perform more towards decreasing "moral imbecility," than all the harangues the community of reformed drunkards ever delivered.

The 105 years there were 77 whites and Democrats, and of the 98, says there were 98 Democrats and 1 white.

Georgia Constitutionalist.
New Bedford Mercury says:—We are satisfied in recording an occurrence worthy as it is rare. The of our subscribers, a worthy sing mechanic of this town for the Weekly Mercury, and paid the whole arrears and is advanced up to 1854. He had been an old debtor, for ten years past, and it was but fair now to shift the responsibility. We have other like accounts on our books not a few, which we should gladly see treated in the same manner, in respect to arrears along. At your service, gentlemen!

A. Nut, for the Clay Nullifiers.—The Camden, Ala. Plaindealer says:—How can the old Carolina and Georgia nullifiers, who ten years ago were ready at a moment's warning to spend the last drop of their blood in maintenance of their principles, now consistently be found in the ranks of H. Clay, whose very principles and measures the nullifiers were then fighting against? Is he not the same now that he was then; and is not his tariff doctrine as monstrous in theory, and as oppressive in practice, now as then? If these men were not traitors to their country in 1833, must they not inevitably be traitors to their principles and party in 1847?

We should like to see the Clay Nullifiers attempt to crack that, and we take it they would find it rather trying to their teeth.

NATIONAL BANKS.
There are truths in the following extract from the financial article of the "Republican," which are worthy of every man's consideration:

"The attempts which have been made of late years to establish banks both on the continent of Europe, in the United States, and the British colonies, emanate from the British paper system. The extension and rapidity of commercial intercourse of late years has been such as to militate against the maintenance of a paper system in one country, while the nations with which it has intercourse have only a specie currency; because, whenever the volume of the paper currency swells above the level of the surrounding nations, it suffers a disastrous depletion. The paper currency of England is so interwoven with the national institutions that its overthrow involves a radical revolution in the Government. The crisis is hastened by every concession in favor of free trade, and every improved means of communication, and can be stayed only by the introduction of the paper system into other countries; in order that when the volume of the British currency swells, the equilibrium may be retained by the corresponding rise in the currency abroad. The establishment of a national bank in this country has long been sought for, as the means of selling British goods here. The British manufacturer would give his voice in his goods, no matter how high it imposed, provided the accompanying of a national bank is granted. A man is utterly powerless in the prevention of imports under the swelling volume of a paper currency. This fact it is which caused a few years since a rapid extension of banking throughout the world. In France, under Baffin, in Belgium, in Austria, in the West Indies, in South America, Australia, the East Indies, and the British North American Colonies. In all these regions bank paper was multiplied. The result was an immense sale of British manufactures, ending in universal bankruptcy when the north of Europe demanded hard money for coin."

BETTING ON A DUEL.

A duel took place the other day between two Editors in Vicksburg, which opened a field for betting equal to the race of Belshazzar and Henry. The whole town seemed to be alive to the interest of the scene, and those who could not go, were the river to witness the deadly combat. The duelists were on the bank, with a boat containing a crossing and recrossing, as a kind of courier to bring the news. As the first long, lank-looking genius said, "I'll bet a bale of cotton that Hammet is hit." Done said his companion.

The skill soon arrived with news that Hammet was hit, and that they were preparing for another shot. "Double or quits the Ryan goes killed this shot," said his weasel-looking companion. Done said the long genius. Pop went the pistol, and again there was a long pause, while the courier boat was crossing to give intelligence of the fate of the life or death of a human being, in whose fate numerous bets would be decided. All was eagerness and anxiety, for some had mounted, other cotton—and in one instance a horse, bet offered, when the reply was, "I haven't any money, but I'll bet on a race-horse that Hammet kills him."

At length, these unnatural bets were decided by the fall of Ryan at the fourth round. When the body was brought over, mortally wounded, and poor Ryan in the last agonies of death, the long genius wanted his weasel looking friend to look over, but he gave up the last breath was out of his body, and says, "Well, if you bet me five to one, I'll bet you he didn't die at all."

It must add considerably to the dignity of the whole thing, to know that you stand in the position of a race-horse, or a game-cock, for black legs to bet upon, and that your dying groans are unheeded except so far as they affect the wagers made for a duel.

hundreds of our young men, if they could be persuaded that a few acres of ground are a better capital than many thousands of dollars procured by writing their names at the bottom of a negotiable note; and what years of misery might be saved if men would believe that a dollar actually earned, as by farmers and mechanics, is worth a hundred in prospect to be gained in trade and speculation.—Saturday Cour.

Always have a book within your reach, which you may catch up at your odd minutes. Resolve to edge in a little reading every day, if it is but a single sentence. If you can gain fifteen minutes a day, it will be felt at the end of the year.

Regulate your thoughts when not at study. A man is thinking even while at work. Why may he not be thinking about something that is useful?

Resolve in your mind what you have last been reading.

Remember that most of the matchless effusions of Robert Burns were conceived while he was toiling after the plough.

FIFTEEN DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE HIBERNIA.
The steamship Hibernia arrived at the wharf in East Boston on the 6th inst.

By this arrival we have Liverpool dates of the 19th April, London 19th, and Paris, Havre and Dublin of the 16th.

The fall in Cotton is from 1/2 to 1/4 per lb.—a piece of information that will astonish all the cotton speculators in the country.

The following summary is compiled from Wilmer & Smith's European Times of 19th ultimo.

The Texas question of annexation had reached England, and produced a very great sensation in political circles.

Ireland was in a very excited state, and our next accounts from Great Britain must be of the most interesting nature.

Mr. Carey's letter in relation to the State debt of Maryland, has been published in London, with some very sarcastic remarks.

The Calcutta arrived out on the 15th of April.

Parliament met after Eastern holidays on Monday, and the popular branch of the Legislature has since been engaged in the consideration of a number of multifarious, but not very absorbing questions.

The English press appears desirous that their government should not interpose in the proposed measure of annexing Texas to the U. States.

Rev. Sydney Smith has written a letter to say that Mr. Everett, American Minister, only spent forty eight hours in his house.

The Italian Refugees have had a great banquet in Paris. Lord Alinger is dead.

IRELAND.
State Prosecutions.—Monday was the day of Eastern Term. The Crown set the convicted Repealers with a rule, to appear for judgment, when according to usual practice, and the other hand, have served the Crown with a two day rule of notice, to move trial.

The grounds on which a new is prayed, for, are similar to the prominently brought forward on the trial.

Singular and Melancholy Death.—A respectable citizen of Mohawk, Milereek township, Ohio, named Mediras, came to his death a few days since in a most singular manner. The Cincinnati Messenger says, one day last week he was engaged in writing a letter, and accidentally picked his finger under the nail with a steel pen.

He paid no attention to the wound at the time, but in a few days afterward the finger began to inflame and swell, and spreading to the arm, he suffered the most excruciating pain. Physicians were called, but could afford him no relief, and on Monday he was seized with lock-jaw, with which terrible disease he died.

We remember, says the same paper, to have seen some months ago, in an Eastern paper, an article warning the public against the use of a certain quality of blue-writing ink, which is said to be impregnated with a poison almost as fatal as that of a rattlesnake. Could this gentleman's death have been caused by inoculation into his system of such ink?

From the Hartford Daily Times.
ADAMS AND CLAY'S BARGAIN AND SALE.

The following letter from Andrew Jackson puts to rest a false rumor circulated by the federal press, with regard to his sentiments on the subject of the corrupt bargain between John Q. Adams and Henry Clay, by which the latter was made Secretary of State. The letter bears the impress of Andrew Jackson's character—open, bold, honest, and to the point. Here it is:

A CARD.
To the editor of the Nashville Union:

GENTLEMEN: My attention has been called to various newspaper articles referring to a letter said to have been written by me to General Hamilton, recanting the charge of bargain made against Mr. Clay when he was for Mr. Adams in 1825.

To put an end to all such rumors, I feel it to be due to myself, to state that I have no recollection of ever having written such a letter, and do not believe there is a letter from me to General Hamilton, or any one else, that will bear such a construction; of the charges brought against both Mr. Adams and me.

My opinion as the country at large, did, facts and circumstances that were indisputable and conclusive; and I may add that this opinion has undergone no change.

If General Hamilton, or any one else, has a letter from me on this subject, which the friends of Mr. Clay desire to be made public, all they have to do is to apply to him for it.

I have no secret, and do not fear the publication of all that I have ever written on this or any other subject.

ANDREW JACKSON.
HERITAGE, May 3, 1844.

TO THE VOTERS OF BENTON COUNTY.
FELLOW CITIZENS:—Whereas it has become the practice of the day for candidates to treat men to whiskey and make stump speeches, and a practice I never thought well of, and as the Irish call it blarney, it surely is a mark of flattery in the highest degree.

I wish men to consult their minds coolly, soberly and deliberately, not to be infatuated by grog or high flowery words, conveying fair promises which perhaps are never thought of again.

What he will try to do, is as much as any man ought to promise—what he can do is uncertain, but it is not uncertain, if he be honest, what he will try to do.

As for long flowery speeches, I myself would not give four pence a hundred for them; notwithstanding they please some people. I am a plain man, and wish to look before I leap—perhaps some may think I am too much a b, but I intend to let Benton County know my whys and wherefores.

I have for a long time thought that this State and this County in particular ought to have a better poor man's law than what it has. I will mention some of them.

The first is our legislature, gets too often and too long. It appears to me that when we try to pick smart men to make our laws and regulations, they ought to be wise enough to make such as would stand more than one year; but the fact is, if possible, they would repeal some before they get home.

Well under these circumstances, who can know what the law is? The lawyers do not know themselves. The last legislature done a great heap of what was it? A goodly number of divorces, changing names of counties, men and women, corporation, donations, contributions, restitutions, taxations; and I might go on till figures would run out.

We thought we were about winding up the banking system, and it may be so, but I don't see the first, or hardly the first end round the beam.

Well the next is the County Court and its expenses. We have an everlasting no end to counting. I never knew any good in so much counting, even in a matrimonial sense.

It may be a little fun to some of the parties, but the family have to pay the expense—if a girl has a beau, the family has to board him. Well its pretty much the same in our courts—the beaux, the dandies, the Judges and all the host have to be paid.

Well how will we get rid of it? We the people put things up, and we the people can put them down again, and it is not too soon to set about trying. I say myself we never can stand it. If we will go right to work we will do it. They may talk of the five mechanical powers, the screw, the wedge, the pulley, the lever and plane; but these are nothing in son to man.

rounds of all the country, and of course he must in all probability come to the wall.

Why not the Circuit Courts do all the business that is done? I think I can answer that question. It would dispense with a host of lawyers. Here they start from the Magistrate's Court to the County, Circuit, and Supreme Court, and often back where they started. Why all this? Have not our Judges and Jurors sense enough to do a man justice at the first, without going to so many courts?

I think we can do better without so much courting business. I know it will be a hard matter to get rid of them; but we the people made them and we the people can pull them down again.

All you have to do is simply to put your ram's horns in the right kind of blowers and we will not have to go seven times round before they will fall. Those who are interested in this round of business will tell the people they can't have justice done without it; but time has taught them better. Look at the taxes and see what goes with the money.

It is not to buy you a little home, no it is to keep up a host, almost like Pharaoh's host of officers. Labor with too many has got to be a disgraceful thing, and to pick the pocket of public desirable, and while they do the picking set in the shade.

Oh Alabama, how long will you bear to be imposed upon. You have had fair promises, until I am tired of them, and if you think I am not a good workman, take some other that is neither ashamed nor afraid to blow.

Look at the tax; I think it will have to be paid, but guard against the time to come. The big men have got us in, and we the little ones will have to prize out again. Be warned by me: I am teeth & nails against banking. When I have any thing I want it to be the thing it calls for; but you may put these rags in your pocket and they will come out like the manna of old times—not last till the next day. I want the good old Shylock hard that eternally never failed; at least I have been acquainted with it fifty years, and it has not varied as much as the North Star.

Fellow citizens: I am compelled to labor or do the starving thing, and this is the reason why I write my Circular. My politics never have been hid by me. I go the whole hog—a democrat—a Van Buren man, or any one else that side nominates, but if I had to say who should run, it should be Mr. Van Buren.

I wish fellow-citizens, for you to make all the enquiry about me you may desire, and if you think I will suit you, this much I will say, that your confidence shall not be betrayed by me. So far as is honest and right I will go and no farther, unless deceived in my judgment.

DANIEL GENT.

"We have proved an alibi by five witnesses," said a lawyer in a Criminal Court lately. "Yes, I am ready to admit," said the opposing counsel, "that you have proved a lie by five of your witnesses."

P. KERINS

TENDERS his thanks to his old friends and customers for the liberal patronage heretofore received; and takes this method of informing the public generally, that he still continues to carry on the Tailoring Business. He has removed his shop to the room formerly occupied by Judge Smith as a Law Office, next door south of the Brick Tavern, where he hopes by strict attention and faithful execution of work to merit and receive a continuance of patronage.

WARE-HOUSE AND
COMMISSION BUSINESS.
I would respectfully inform my old friends and customers, and the public generally, that I shall again on the 1st of October, commence the above business, and shall prepared to advance at any time after the date, either Cash, Bagging and Rope, Groceries, upon Cotton or Merchandise stored with me. And as I have gone to great expense in building a large Fire-Proof Warehouse, as I trust for the benefit and accommodation of my old friends and patrons, and the public generally, I hope by attending strictly to all business entrusted to my care, I shall receive a liberal share of custom. I would inform those who may have any apprehension from high water, that I am now filling up my yard entirely above high water mark, higher than the water has ever been known to rise.

As I am informed that some of the Warehouse men, are trying to get business by cutting under, (as we call it) I would inform all who have an idea of giving me their business, that I intend to do business as low as any other house.

I have associated my brother A. Hatchett, in the business with me, and we shall do business under the name of W. T. Hatchett, & Bro.

year 1843. The tract is appraised at three hundred and fifty dollars; tax one dollar and forty cents.

I will sell on Monday the 15th day of July next, to the highest bidder, for cash, at the court-house door in the town of Jacksonville, a lot in White Plains, known and described as a half acre lot, to pay the State tax on the same for the year 1843. The lot is appraised at one hundred dollars; tax forty cents.

Chancery Rules.

By the Register for the 39th District of the North Division of the State of Alabama, at Jacksonville, Monday April 15th, 1844.

THIS day
came the complainant
by his Solicitors White
& Parsons, and moved the Register for an Order of Publication as to Defendant
James Clarke, and it appearing to the satisfaction of the Register by affidavit on file, that said Clarke is a non-resident of the State of Alabama and that he is of the age of twenty-one years. It is therefore ordered by the Register, that publication be made in the Jacksonville Republican, a paper published in the Town of Jacksonville, for five consecutive weeks, notifying the said James Clarke, within ninety days from the date of this order to appear before said Register and plead answer or demur to Complainant's bill, or the same will be taken for confessed as to him and set for hearing ex parte.
A true copy from the minutes.
Wm. H. ESTILL, Register.

Bill charges that on or about the 12th day of December, 1837, Complainant sold to said James Clarke, and his wife Susan Henderson, one half in the north-east quarter (1-4) of Section twenty-eight (28.) Township fourteen (14), Range eight (8) east in the Coosa Land District, for the sum of fifteen hundred and twenty dollars, evidenced by a note of said Clarke for that sum in favor of Complainant; due the 25th of December next after, with interest from date and by bond for title by Complainant to said Clarke, to be made when purchase money was paid. Bill charges that William T. Givens and Edward Herndon are in possession of said land under pretended purchase, that said Clarke has left the State and has failed to pay the purchase money for said land, save about six hundred and thirty-seven dollars and 80-100. Bill prays order of sale of said land and appropriation of the proceeds of such sale to the costs of this proceeding and then to the payment of the purchase money, and for general relief.

of publication as to William Strain and Jabez Henderson and his wife Susan Henderson, John Strain and Isaac Strain.
And it appearing to the satisfaction of the Register, from an Affidavit on file, that the said William Strain and Jabez
Henderson and his wife Susan Henderson, reside in Bradley County, Tennessee; John Strain resides in the State of Mississippi—Isaac Strain resides in the State of Arkansas—all beyond the limits of the State of Alabama. It is therefore ordered by the Register, that publication be made in the Jacksonville Republican, a newspaper published in the Town of Jacksonville, and that notice be posted at the court house door for 4 consecutive weeks
notifying the said William Strain, Jabez
Henderson and his wife Susan Henderson, John Strain and Isaac Strain, to appear before the Register, within sixty days from the date of this order, and plead, answer or demur to the Complainant's Bill or the same will be taken pro confesso as to them and be set for hearing ex parte.
Wm. H. ESTILL, Register.

The Bill in the above case charges, that in December, 1837, the Complainant, John Robertson, sold a Tract of Land, being in Benton County, known as the south-west quarter of Section nineteen, in Fractional Township thirteen of Range ten, in the District of Lands subject to sale at Mardisville, Alabama, to James Strain, and executed to him his bond, conditioned to make titles to the said land, when the purchase money should be paid, and a patent should issue from the General Government of the United States—that a promissory note for four hundred and twenty-seven dollars and twenty-eight cents, dated 16th December, 1841, due one day after date, and payable to the Complainant was given for the said land and remains unpaid. That James Strain departed this life insolvent and intestate in October, 1842, and that his estate is wholly insufficient to pay off his debts. The Bill prays a sale of the Land, and the appropriation of the proceeds of the sale to the payment, first of the said promissory note, then to the payment of the costs of this suit, including the fees of Complainant's Solicitors, and that the overplus, if any there be, be disposed of, as the Court may direct,
and for such other and further relief as to the Court may seem just.

THE LONE STAR OF THE SOUTH.

BY J. E. DOW.

Far Southward o'er the Sabine's stream,
A young Republic lifts her head;
Whose single star doth proudly gleam
O'er valor's grave and glory's bed:
The star of empire took its flight
From freedom's coronal of light—
Beamed o'er Jacinto's deathless plain,
And watched a nation's birth again.
And there he saw, how strangely still,
The Indian city sits alone;
No herd upon the verdant hill,
No skeleton beneath the stone.
Forsaken mart of ages, start
Life's current from thy marble heart;
And bid the pulse of empire beat,
Through ivied hall and mossy street.

Beside the green and sculptured piles,
Whose roofs support the ancient woods,
The hunter's home in beauty smiles,
And joy runs through the solitudes.
And where the western druid trod,
And offered human blood to God,
The gospel bell doth sweetly chime,
At Sabbath morn and even time.

The fierce Cumancé seeks his home
Beyond the Rio Bravo's wave;
No more in bat'le 'dint to roam
Around his father's sunken grave;
While the broad stream, whose bosom ne'er
Knew but the swan and fallow deer,
Whirls the swift steamboat's wheel along,
And echoes to the boatman's song.

Oh! 'tis a fair and goodly land,
Where restless spirits love to roam;
Where labor spreads his rugged hand,
And decks with flowers contentment's home;
Where prairies vast the woods embrace,
And rivers run their endless race,
And wild winds whisper to the sea
Of ages past, and yet to be.

To its green breast young nations cling,
And raise the wail of infant life;
While commerce spreads her ocean wing,
And war's wild bugle wakens strife.
And there the freeman from afar
Sees on its flag a pilgrim star,
And strives the glorious hour to learn
When the "Lost Pleiad" shall return.

There shall the wave of life roll on,
As rolled the North on Europe's shore,
Till the law boundary is won,
And Ocean's waves drown its roar.
O'er martyr's grave and monarch's tomb
O'er tyrant's throne and knight's plume
O'er craven hosts to slaughter led—
The Northern soldier's foot shall tread.

What! let the British lion roam
Along the prairies of the South?
Leave life, and liberty, and home,
Dependent on his gory mouth?
Oh! sooner should our children fold
In deepest shame the stars of gold,
And bury freedom's burning shield
On every deathless battle field.

Oh! for a coal of burning fire
That from the Almighty's conser fell,
To touch the lips of son and sire,
And break the soul-destroying spell!
Then should the freemen scorn the name
Of him who dipped his pen in shame,
And, o'er the Revolution's urn,
Forbade a sister State's return!

Scene in a "Down East, Printing Office."
"Jim, what are you doing there on the floor?"

"Why, Sir, I have had a shock."
"A Shock!"
"Yes, Sir."
"What kind of a shock?"
"Why, Sir, one of your subscribers came in during your absence, and offered to pay a year's subscription which produced such an effect upon me that I have been perfectly helpless ever since."

"No wonder, Jim, but cheer up, if you survive this, you are safe, as there is very little prospect of another such catastrophe in this office."

A Cutting Reply—A poor beggar boy applied for alms at the house of an avaricious preacher in —, and received a dry, mouldy crust. The divine inquired of the boy if he could say the Lord's prayer, and was answered in the negative. "Then," said the rector, "I will teach you that. Our father—"Our father?" said the boy, "is my father as well as yours?" "Yes, certainly." "Why, then," replied the boy, "how could you give your brother this hard crust of bread?"

"I have three rules," said Lord Broughman. "The first is, to be a whole man to one thing at a time; the second, never to lose an opportunity of doing any thing which can be done; the third never intrust to others what I ought to do myself."

"Doth God Reason?"—Sir James McIntosh, when at Paris, paid a visit to the deaf and dumb institution there. The Abbé Sicard introduced several of his pupils to him, one of whom, (Massieu), at the request of Sir James, the following question was submitted: "Doth God reason?" Massieu, on seeing the question written, at first appeared perplexed; but soon after returned this decisive and logical solution: "God sees every thing—God foresees every thing—God knows every thing. To reason is to doubt, to hesitate. To inquire the highest attribute of limited intelligence. God, therefore, doth not reason." The Abbé, when at Brighton, a short time since, with Massieu, was met at the custom house by a gentleman acquainted with the anecdote above related, and who begged him again to propound the same question to his pupil which he politely did, and the answer returned was: "Men reason, but God does not. God, who knows truth, is not in want of reason, and does not reason."

SMALL FARMS.

Perhaps the greatest mistake in the farming of America, is the practice of attempting to cultivate more land than can be well tilled. This system may be properly styled surface culture; and it has been the means of impoverishing more land than any other cause. In the great South-West, as well as in the South-East, thousands and thousands of acres have been worn out, and abandoned to the growth of broom sedge, by this ill directed mode of procedure. It remains no longer doubtful that a hundred bushels of corn can be grown on a single acre of ground, and with little more labor in tillage than is required for cultivating an acre that yields but twelve or fifteen bushels. The secret of permanent success in every thing, is to do all well that is attempted. Five acres, well prepared and well cultivated, will produce much as twenty-five acres on the common exhausting plan. This is obvious; this statement being admitted, that one-fifth of the land now cultivated, might, with a different system, produce as much as the present growth in the country. It is also evident on the supposition that agriculture might be made five times more profitable, and as surely the pleasure and honor of the profession might be signally augmented. Through manuring—deep ploughing—good seed—timely planting—proper rotation of crops, and neat culture, would work wonders in our Agriculture.

The intellectual enjoyment and real moral of improved husbandry are not to be overlooked. In consequence of the love of a garden, the abode of the just in the next world is a garden of paradise, a garden or a heaven; and when it is remembered the whole farm can be made as interesting as a finely cultivated garden, there is something truly enchanting in the farmer's profession. A rich and well tilled field affords the most lovely scenes; but a poor field, with an indifferent crop, is certainly discouraging. Time will be when this subject will duly appreciated by the farming world.—Tennessee Agriculturist.

On Sunday night an attempt was made to enter the building occupied as the Cashier's room of the Bank of St. Marys, containing the Vault of the Bank which is made of solid heavy Brickwork, and enclosed in the strong Brick wall. The other wall of the building being very thick, the rogue succeeded in getting only two thirds of the way through it. He had accomplished that he could have made nothing by the operation, as all of the funds of the Bank are kept in the Vault, which is one of the most secure in the State, and the Gold, and most of the Bank Notes are deposited in an Iron Safe within the Vault. It is not only constructed of solid iron, but has an inner as well as outer door of heavy iron, secured with three first rate locks. We are informed that the Bank intends to make assurance doubly sure, by having a constant guard to prevent a similar attempt.—Columbus Times.

POOR RELATIONS.—A laborer in Montreal has had eleven thousand pounds sterling left him by the decease of a relative in England, an officer in the Royal Artillery, besides clothing, jewelry and other things of much value. He received by the last packet the necessary documents to allow him to draw immediately for £3,000. The poor relation, we suppose, was the only heir, as they are seldom remembered in such men's wills.—Tribune.

Why is a dog with a broken leg like a boy at arithmetic? Because he puts down 3 and carries 1.—Olympus.

THE EMIGRANT'S FAMILY.

From Brougham's Irish Entertainment.

One of the strongest peculiarities—indeed, I may say passions—of the Irish, is their devoted fondness for their offspring.

A curious illustration of this occurred to me on my recent journey through the northern lakes. It happened to be what sailors call very dirty weather, finished up by a tremendous gale, which obliged us to seek shelter at a clump of aboriginal barrens, called nianion Island, where we were obliged to remain for five days.—There were a few deck passengers—between five and six hundred, and inasmuch as they had only provided themselves with barely sufficient for the average time, provisions became alarmingly scarce, and no possibility of a supply. To be sure, there was one venerable ox—a sort of semipituitation, an organic remnant—a poor, attenuated, hornless, sightless, bovine patriarch, who obligingly yielded up his small residue of existence for our benefit. It was quite a mercy that we arrived to relieve him from a painful state of suspense, for so old and powerless was he, that if his last breath had not been extracted, he certainly could not have drawn it by himself.

Well as you may suppose, there was considerable consternation aboard. Short, very short allowance was adopted to meet the contingency, and poor deck passengers had a terrible time of it. Amongst the latter was an Irish emigrant, with his wife and three beautiful children, the eldest about 7 years, and all without the smallest subsistence, except what the charity of their fellow passengers could afford them; and as they were scantily supplied, it can readily be imagined how miserably off was this poor family. However, it so happened that the beauty and intelligence of the children attracted the attention of one of our lady passengers, who had them occasionally brought into her cabin, and their hunger appeased. Gleesome, bright eyed little creatures they were, scrupulously clean despite the poverty of their parents, all life and happiness, and blissful ignorance of the want by which they were surrounded.

One day, delighted with her little protégée, the lady happened to say half jestingly—"I wonder would this poor man part with one of these little darlings? I should like to adopt it."

"I don't know," said I, "suppose we make the inquiry."

The inquiry was sent for, and the delicate business opened:—"My dear friend," said the lady, "you are very poor, are you not?"

"His answer was peculiarly Irish.—'Poor! me lady, said he. 'Be the powers of petweller! if there's a poorer man nor me, self-throned in the world, God pity both of us for we'd be about equal.'"

"Then you must find it difficult to support your children," said I, making a long jump towards our object.

"Is it support them, sir?" he replied. "Lord bless ye, I never supported them—they give support somehow or another they've never bin hungry yet—when they are, it'll be time enough to grumble."

"I'm all over thought I—do you have a enough to do to get your money look out for it."

"Well, then," I resumed, with a determined plunge, "would it be a relief to you to part from one of them?"

I had mistaken my mode of attack.—He started, turned pale, and with a wild glare in his eye, literally screamed out—"A relief! God be good to us, what d'ye mane? A relief?—would it be a relief if ye think to have the hand chopped from me body, or the heart torn of the breast?"

"You don't understand us," interposed my philanthropic companion. "Should one be enabled to place your child in ease and comfort, would you interfere with its well doing?"

"The tact of woman! She had touched the chord of paternal solicitude.—the poor fellow was silent, twisted his head about, and looked all bewildered. The struggle between a father's love and a child's interest was evident and affecting. At last he said—"God bless ye, me lady, and I'd be glad to better the child; it isn't in regard to myself, but—but had I better go and spake to Mary; she's the mother of them, & I would be on reasonable to be given away her children afore her face and she not know nothin' of the matter."

"Away with you then," said I, and bring us back word as soon as possible.—In about an hour he returned, but with eyes red and swollen, and features pale from excitement and agitation.

"Well," inquired I, "what success?" "Beddab, 'twas a hard struggle, sir," said he, "but it's for the child's good, and Heaven give us strength to bear it."

"Very good, and which it is to be?" "Why, sir, I've bin spakin' to Mary and she thinks as Norah here is the oldest, she won't miss the mother so much, and if ye'll just let her take a partin' kiss, she'd give her to ye and be a blessing."

So my poor fellow took his child's away, to look at one of them for the last time. It was long ere he returned, but when he did he was leading the second eldest.

"How's this?" said I, "Have you changed your mind?" "Not exactly changed me mind, sir," he replied; "but I've changed the mother."

"Ye see, I've bin spakin' to Mary and she thinks as Norah here is the oldest, she won't miss the mother so much, and if ye'll just let her take a partin' kiss, she'd give her to ye and be a blessing."

whin it come to the end, be gorry! she could 'nt part with Norah, at all; they have got used to each other's ways; but her's little Biddy—she's purtier far, she'll do as well."

"It's all the same," said I, "let Biddy remain."

"May Heaven be yer guardian, cried he, snatching her up in his arms, & giving her one long, hearty kiss. "God be kind to them that's kind to you, and them that offers you hurt or harm may their soul never see St. Peter!" So the bereaved father rushed away, and all that night the child remained with us; but early next morning my friend Pat re-appeared, and this time he had his youngest child, a mere baby, snuggled up in his arms.

"What's the matter now?" said I. "Why, thin, sir," said he, with an expression of the most anxious, "axin yer honor, pardon for bein' so wake-headed, but whin I begun to think of Biddy's eyes—look at them, they're the image of her mother's, bedad—I couldn't let her go; but here's little Paudeen—he won't be much trouble to any one, for if he takes after his mother, he'll have the brightest eye and the softest heart on the top of creation; and if he takes after his father, he'll have a purty hard fist on broad pair of shoulders to push his way through the world. Take him, sir, and give me Biddy."

"Just as you like," said I, having a pretty good guess how matters would eventuate. So he took away his pet Biddy, and heaved me the little toddling creature. This chirping little vagabond won't be long with us thought I. Nor was he. Ten minutes had scarcely elapsed ere he was rushed into the cabin, and sent to his mother in his arms, he turned to me and with large tears bubbling in his eyes, cried out:

"Look at him, sir—just look at him—'tis the youngun. Ye wouldn't have the heart to keep him from us. The long and the short of it is I've bin spakin' to Mary—Ye see she couldn't part with Norah, and I didn't like to let Biddy go; but be me sowl, neither of us could have lived a half a day without little Paudeen. No, sir, no; we can bear the 'durness of poverty, but we can't part from our children unless it's the will of Heaven to take them from us!"

I am with great respect,
Your obedient servant,
AMES K. POLK.

LETTER OF THE HON. D. H. LEWIS.

A writer in the Charleston Mercury holds the following language in regard to this letter:

"The letter, says our correspondent, is characterized by so much hearty zeal in favor of that object—just conception of its true difficulties—thorough acquaintance with its effect upon men and parties, amounting almost to the prophetic—and with all an enthusiastic confidence in its power over the public mind and in its ultimate success—that though written in February last, in anticipation of events, it is so vivid a picture of the reality actually passing before us at this present, as to bear the impress of an exact historical picture."

Mr. Lewis was correct in anticipating that the agitation of the question would be attributed to political design, adverse to Mr. Clay and Mr. Van Buren. He was correct in supposing that the close friends of both these gentlemen would resist the agitation, and if possible stave it off beyond the presidential election, and that notwithstanding both were deeply committed on the question, neither at the present time was friendly to it. That both, as he supposes, can be driven into its support, is abundantly evident from their letters, for they each reserve to themselves three conditions by which they can get on the affirmative of the issue, and what bears a singular appearance of concert in the writing of their letters, is that these conditions are the same in both; viz.—acquiescence of Mexico—a more unanimous indication of the public will—and a movement by England to possess herself of the territory.

From the Charleston Mercury of the 25th. To Gen. ANDREW JACKSON.

Sir,—I have just this instant seen your Card, dated the 24th of May, from the Her tage.

The call you make upon myself does not permit me to be silent. You are entirely correct in your statement. You never wrote a letter to me or even verbally in my hearing made any statement in either the one or the other, of your conviction of the injustice of the charge of "bargain and corruption" preferred against Messrs Adams and Clay. Nor have I ever stated to any human being that you had ever even entertained any such opinion.

I presume that the mistake has grown out of the fact that at a time when I went, "through stich" for you and your preference, I said without reserve to our friends, that I did not think we could make much political capital out of the charge of bargain and corruption, because I did not believe in its justice, and that we had a hundred better cows to milk in our pen than this accusation, hence we had as well have done with it. But this was my opinion, pronounced on no authority of yours.

I can scarcely however quarrel with the occasion which breaks the silence which has so long closed our intercourse. After a painful separation of more than ten years, I have again on the same stage of a great American question, which is to give an empire to our confederacy and a Gibraltar to the South.

Accept the assurances of the veneration and respect which

I am your Fellow Citizen,
J. HAMILTON.

Oswatche Bend, Russell Co., Alabama, May 22, 1844.

Low.—The population of the territory of Iowa has increased most rapidly during the past year. The emigration has been principally from Illinois, Indiana, Pennsylvania, and Ohio, and they have settled very thickly on the Iowa Des Moines river. It is estimated that two thousand families have settled on the new purchase from the Indians on the Des Moines river, land which has not yet come into market. It is said to be fine country, the prairies and timbers being well interspersed, and very fertile; all sorts of sheep have been driven in and Indiana, sometimes as many as two thousand in a single drove. Carding machines and fulling mills have been erected in several places in the territory, and preparations are making for the erection of a woolen factory on the Des Moines. Many excellent flouring mills have been erected, and many more are in the course of erection, and the water power of the country is very fine. The population of the territory is now supposed to be very considerably greater than the limit necessary to form a State.—New Era.

Extract from a letter of Mr. CHAPPELL (Whig) of Georgia, on the Tariff Question and Whig Politics.

Of the responsibility for the defeat of the Tariff Bill, he says:—"Suppose it should fail; it will then become material to inquire what proportion of the blame of its failure should properly be cast on the one party, and what on the other. And in answer to such an inquiry, I should not hesitate to say that, unless some great unexpected change takes place in the course of parties, the heaviest, incomparably the heaviest load of censure and accountability will justly fall on the whig party. A very small number of their votes in each branch if given to the measure, will place its success beyond doubt. Now, if they will refuse this small amount of support, and thus defeat the bill, it is certain, much higher culpability will attach to them, for going a unit against the bill, and in that way ensuring its defeat, than will rest on the democrats for their mere failure to rally the whole of their party to its support."

This view becomes unanswerable when we advert to the fact that even if the whole of the democratic votes should be given in favor of the bill they would not be sufficient to carry it through the Senate—the whigs being there in the majority."

LIBERTY AND TEXAS.

A meeting of the friends of Liberty and Texas was held on Saturday evening, the 18th of May, at Concert Hall, in the city of Washington, on which occasion the propriety of immediate annexation was maintained without a dissenting voice.

Gen. Felix Grundy, McConnell, president, and W. S. Colquhoun was elected secretary.

The Hon. Mr. Belser, of the House of Representatives, addressed the audience in a speech replete with legal, historical argument. Mr. Van Buren's distinction between a Government de facto and de jure, was defined as being nothing less than the slavish doctrine of Kings, denying the right of expatriation. Mr. Clay's fears of embroiling our country in war, fell before the eloquence of a compromised soldier of Liberty and Texas, like "the baseless fabric of a vision." Mr. Belser referred to the anti-American spirit of Daniel Webster and Co. and closed by warning his countrymen against British influence, and the intrigues of demagogues, and the common enemy of the workingmen of this country—the Aristocracy.

The meeting adjourned at 11 o'clock, p. m.

F. G. MCCONNELL, President.
W. S. COLQUHOUN, Secretary.

GEORGIA. The Georgia papers are filled with the proceedings of the various meetings in favor of annexation throughout the State. The Columbus Times, speaking of the letters of Messrs VAN BUREN and CLAY, says:

"Great events have transpired with these papers. They have changed the whole aspect of the presidential question, and it is honorable to the Democratic party to witness with what unflinching promptness they are prepared to take the painful step of parting with the leader in the battle, in whose patriotism and ability, fidelity to his principles, and integrity of character, they have such unwavering confidence."

"The friends of Texas will see in the conduct of the Democratic party, that it is upon that party, and that alone, they can rely, to reannex that disintegrated country to the Union. Virginia has taken the lead in this matter, and the whole South and West must follow. And mark the inference. Mr. Clay took ground against Texas, and the whole Whig party, with honorable individual exceptions, obeyed the dictation. Mr. Van Buren did the same thing, and the Democrats refused to give up Texas; they preferred to give up their leader! Here, then, is a question of party against country; can any man doubt which side will win in such an issue?"

ADVICE GRATIS.—Shut your eyes to the faults of your neighbors open them very wide at your own.

Stop your ears while gossips and slanderers are speaking of others. Take your fingers away to listen to the voice of friendly admonition.

Open your mouth seldom, and never but to the point and purpose. Shut it close when misjudging friendship holds the glass to your lips.

Col. Wm. L. Yancey has been unanimously nominated, by the district convention which met at Wetumpka on the 3rd inst. as the democratic candidate for Congress in the 3d Dist. to fill the vacancy occasioned by the appointment of Hon. D. H. Lewis U. S. Senator.

The first number of the Coon Hunter, the prospectus for which has heretofore been published in this paper, was to have been printed on Saturday last. We expect to receive the 1st No. by the next mail, which persons desirous of subscribing can have an opportunity to examine it by calling at our office.

An important correction has been made in the advertisement of Mr. Wm. T. Hatchett, since its insertion in last week's paper. In that number it read, "after that date," (referring to 1st Oct. next) advances would be made on Cotton, &c.—It now reads "after this date."

Several Communication unavoidably deferred.

In our last number we expressed the anxiety which we felt with reference to the nomination of the democratic candidate for the presidency. Since that time our anxiety has been entirely relieved, by the news of the nomination of JAMES K. POLK. We are gratified, and we congratulate the democratic party—that the nomination is such as it is. To the observer of political events for several months it has been apparent, that there existed views seriously conflicting with each other, with respect to the question, who of the many distinguished individuals spoken of was best entitled to the nomination? A discussion, of the merits of these different individuals, conducted by their respective friends, had engendered so much acrimonious feeling, as to preclude a hearty concurrence in the support of one by the friends of the others. Upon James K.

Polk, whose claims to the nomination had not been fully established, we had seen from the imperfect rivalry, displayed in the nomination of others, and to whom there was of consequence attached no animosity of his political brethren; all the entire democratic party in every section of the country, in the north, the east, and the south may, without the slightest effort, which always attends unsuccessful emulation, and at the same time without a sacrifice of principle, consent to the nomination of James K. Polk, because we believe him eminently qualified by the orthodoxy of his political tenets, his experience as a statesman, his correct understanding of our government and its policy, by his talents, by his unimpeached and unimpeachable integrity, and by his spotless moral character.

BALTIMORE CONVENTION.

The Convention assembled, and proceeded to ballot for the Presidency. The result was as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
Van Buren	146	127	121	111	103	101	99
Cass	83	94	92	108	107	116	123
Fillmore	23	33	38	32	35	28	21
Calhoun	9	11	17	26	25	22	1
Stewart	0	0	0	0	0	0	0

There are 266 Delegates in the Convention, without South Carolina, which State is not represented. Two-thirds of this number are 178, which vote must be obtained by any candidate who gains the nomination.

THE PRESIDENTIAL TICKET OF THE DEMOCRACY COMPLETED.

The Hon. GEORGE M. DALLAS, of Pennsylvania, was chosen to-day by the democratic national convention as the candidate for the Vice Presidency. Mr. Wright, of New York, having declined the nomination. Mr. Wright's refusal grew out of no dissatisfaction conceived at the nomination of Col. Polk. On the contrary, he cheerfully acquiesces in this nomination, which was unanimously supported by the whole New York delegation; and will, we are sure, give it as efficient aid in his State, although not on the ticket, as if he were assimilated with it. Mr. Wright, long since, in a published letter declined to allow the use of his name in the convention for the presidency or vice presidency. The nomination of Mr. Dallas for the latter office will dissipate the regret felt that Mr. Wright could not consent, with his views of his duty, to accept the nomination. Mr. Wright will render the country much more useful service on the floor of the Senate than he could in his chair; and no man could be found to fill the presiding officer's station with more dignity, grace, and usefulness, than Mr. Dallas.

In regard to the expediency of the nomination of Mr. Dallas, as a means of securing success to the convention ticket, none can doubt. Justice to Pennsylvania, long deferred, can now be done to the satisfaction of the party; and there is no power on which she would not willingly have her voice conferred than on that of Dallas. The long associated with the struggles of the democracy? It will be peculiarly endeared to the people of the State generally, by the recollection that, when Biddle reigned in Philadelphia, Mr. Dallas was literally ostracized from his home for the fearless manner in which he asserted the repeatability of charters by the legislative power granting them.

The national intelligence of this morning, commenting on the nomination of Gov. Polk, treats it with affected scorn. "This nomination," says the intelligence, "may be considered as the dying gasp, the last breath of life, of the democratic party. Disabled by a cunning and successful stratagem, from the support of Mr. Van Buren, whom they really preferred to whom they owed the honor of a nomination, and to whom a decided majority actually gave their votes; unable to rally even a majority in favor of any one of the other candidates, whose claims have been before the people the convention appears, by a preconcerted movement, rather than break up in utter confusion, to have unanimously thrown away its vote, and let itself down on Mr. Polk."

The sting of this sentence is marked in italics by the editor. What will be the probable condition of the party, should it be defeated by one so misnamed? And this, we predict confidently, will be its fate. The union of the democracy, north and south, was the only requisite to secure its success; and that has been happily accomplished in the person of Gov. Polk. But the intelligence feigns great satisfaction at the result. It continues:

"Certainly, for a respectable gentleman, such as we have admitted Mr. Polk to be, the whigs could not have desired a candidate for the presidency, on the part of the democracy, who would present less imposing claims to that high station, or whom the great statesman of the West would have further behind in any comparison of abilities, of services, or of all the high qualities which are fit to illustrate and adorn the station of chief magistrate of this republic."

Very well, the great statesman of the West will find how he will fare in the hands of the man who is represented as having "no pretensions as a statesman," and as one to whom the democracy has let itself down. If high-handed federalism and its Goliath of the West should be compelled to bow to the Davin of democracy, arrogance will have received a most salutary rebuke. The weight of Mr. Dallas is yet to be tested in the intelligence's scales. He, too, we presume, will be found wanting in those qualifications which so amply qualify Mr. Freminghuysen for the second office of the government—inverecant, federalism, and that bigoted philanthropy which would have surrendered the region of the new States to the Indians, and that of the old States to the negroes.—Globe.

THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE BALTIMORE DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CONVENTION.

THURSDAY, May 30, 1844.
The convention was called to order at 7 1/2 o'clock, when

Mr. Hubbard of New Hampshire, chairman of the committee, to inform Messrs. Polk and Wright of their nomination, stated that they had for a long communication to both these gentlemen; and that in relation to Mr. Wright, although no reply had been received from him, yet they had reason to believe that he would decline the nomination.

Mr. Butler of New York, Chairman of the committee to prepare an address to the people of the United States, reported the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted; and, on motion, leave was granted to the committee to prepare the address at their leisure:

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, That the American democracy place their trust not in factitious symbols, not in displays and appeals insulting to the judgments and subversive of the intellect of the people; but in a clear reliance upon the intelligence, the patriotism, and the discriminating justice of the American masses.

Resolved, That we regard this as a distinctive feature of our political creed, which we are proud to maintain before the world as the great moral element in a form of government, springing from and upheld by the popular will; and we contrast it with the creed and practice of federalism, under whatever name or form, which seeks to pervert the will of the constituent; and which conceives no imposture too monstrous for the popular credulity.

Resolved, therefore, That, entertaining these views, the democratic party of this Union, through their delegates assembled in a general convention of the States, congregate in a spirit of concord, of devotion to the doctrines and faith of a free representative government, and appealing to their fellow-citizens for the rectitude of their intentions, renew and re-assert before the American people, the declaration of principles avowed by them when, on a former occasion, in general convention, they presented their candidates for the popular suffrages:

1. That the federal government is one of limited powers, derived solely from the constitution, and the grants of power shown therein, ought to be strictly construed by all the departments and agents of the government; and that it is inexpedient and dangerous to exercise doubtful constitutional powers.

2. That the constitution does not confer authority upon the federal government, directly or indirectly, to assume the debts of the several States, contracted for local internal improvements, or other State purposes; nor would such assumption be just and expedient.

3. That just and sound policy forbid the federal government to foster one branch of industry to the detriment of another, or to cherish the interests of one portion to the injury of another portion of our common country; that every citizen and every section of the country that has a right to demand and insist upon an equality of rights and privileges, and to complete and ample protection of persons and property from domestic violence or foreign aggression.

4. That it is the duty of every branch of the government to enforce and practice the most rigid economy in conducting our public affairs, and that no more revenue ought to be raised than is required to defray the necessary expenses of the government.

5. That Congress has no power to charter a national bank; that we believe such an institution one of deadly hostility to the best interests of the country, dangerous to our republican institutions and the liberties of the people, and calculated to place the business of the country within the control of a concentrated money power, and above the laws and the will of the people.

6. That Congress has no power, under the constitution, to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States; and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs, not prohibited by the constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take ineffectual steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend to our political institutions.

7. That the separation of the moneys of the government from banking institutions, is indispensable for the safety of the funds of the government and the rights of the people.

8. That the liberal principles embodied in Jefferson in the declaration of independence, and sanctified in the constitution, which makes ours the land of liberty, and the asylum of the oppressed of every nation, have ever been cardinal principles in the democratic faith; and every attempt to abridge the present privilege of becoming citizens and the owners of soil among us, ought to be, resisted with the same spirit which swept the alien and seditious laws from our statute book.

Resolved, That the proceeds of the public lands ought to be sacredly applied to the national objects specified in the constitution; and that we are opposed to the law lately adopted, and to any law for the distribution of such proceeds among the States, as alike inexpedient in policy and repugnant to the constitution.

Resolved, That we are decidedly opposed to taking from the President the qualified veto power by which he is enabled, under restrictions and responsibilities, amply sufficient to guard the public interest, to suspend the passage of a bill, whose merits cannot secure the approval of two-thirds of the Senate and House of Representatives, until the judgment of the people can be obtained thereon, and which has thrice saved the American people from the corrupt and tyrannical domination of the Bank of the United States.

Resolved, That our title to the whole of the Territory of Oregon is clear and unquestionable; that no portion of the same ought to be ceded to England, or any other power; and that the re-occupation of Oregon and the reannexation of Texas, at the earliest practicable period, are great American measures, which this convention recommends to the hearty support of the democratic party.

Resolved, That this convention hereby presents to the people of the United States James K. Polk, of Tennessee, as the candidate of the democratic party for the office of President, and George M. Dallas, of Pennsylvania, as the candidate of the democratic party for the office of Vice President of the United States.

And the labor of the convention having been closed by the adoption of a number of other resolutions, Mr. Clifford, of Maine, moved that the convention do adjourn.

Mr. Wright, (president,) before putting the question, addressed the convention as follows: Gentlemen of the Convention, I am happy to see you here. Our labors are brought to a termination: our work is done. In a few hours we leave this theatre of the last four days' action, and will enter the great political vineyard of the nation, where it is to be hoped each one of us will severally discharge the important duty he owes our common country—by the preservation of those immutable principles contained in the great democratic creed—perseverance and labor in the republican faith, and by the protection of all those sacred rights transmitted to us and to our country by our illustrious ancestors, and which are above all price.

We shall enter the campaign of 1844 under the most auspicious circumstances of success. To our enemy the democratic legions present an undivided and unbroken front. The perfect unanimity, that has characterized our deliberations—the character and qualifications of our candidates, are arguments that carry conviction to the mind. The East and the West, the North and the South, have joined hands in the ties of a holy brotherhood, and have resolved to conquer. The democratic flag, that has dragged its broad folds in the dust since the disastrous campaign of 1840, is now ready to wave till the enemy is routed, and the country redeemed.

Who can assail our candidates? Who can charge upon them a want of ability? Who can deny their truth, their intelligence, their virtue? We may hold them up as the Roman mother did her children, and say in her language: "These are our jewels!" These are our standard bearers in the noblest contest the democracy of the nation ever encountered; and if, with them, we cannot triumph, democracy is but a by-word, and the name and memory of Jefferson should be stricken from the catalogue of the benefactors of the human race—the founder of the grandest theory of republicanism ever presented to the world! Let his memory be obliterated, and his deeds be forgotten, when the principles of the great charter he presented to the nation are trampled upon and disregarded.

Gentlemen, I cannot take leave of you without expressions of intense pain, and the most agreeable emotions of pleasure. My voice fails, under the thought that we part forever! This body, composed of the most distinguished men of this great, this mighty nation, have come here from all parts of the Union—each State delegating to her most distinguished sons, the most solemn trust ever reposed in any body of men since that day when, in the halls of the continental Congress, the great charter of human liberty was born. If the eastern conqueror wapt over the millions of human beings passing in review before him, that, in a short time, not one of them should be left, how much more reason have I to weep at the thought that this monument of mind before me must pass away, in the change of all things! It cannot be. It will last, and be fresh on the page of our country's history when the pyramids of the Nile shall have crumbled, stone by stone, to atoms. The man may die; but the fruits of his mind are the growth of eternity.

To you has been intrusted the important charge of preserving the sacred charter of liberty—the principles contained in Mr. Jefferson's inaugural address. The duty has been most faithfully performed.

But, gentlemen, I leave you, with feelings of pleasure, because I religiously believe we have accomplished a work this day that shall stand recorded to the honor and the glory of our country; and that work is the laying of the corner stone of the restoration of the democratic ascendancy. Without this the country cannot flourish, with it, she is the Hercules of nations.

I leave you, gentlemen; and, in retiring from this distinguished post, which, in your patrialty, you unanimously assigned to me, have the solace that the same body unanimously approved of the manner in which I have discharged its important duties. Pardon me for another word: enter into the approaching contest with vigor, with energy, and with a determination to triumph, and the result is certain. "Union is strength," and "truth is might." Our principles are our shield, justice our sword, and our battlements are the hearts of the people.

The question was then taken on the motion adjourn, and agreed to.

From the Globe.
"SELF-DENIAL—CONCESSION—UNION—HARMONY—EVERYTHING FOR THE CAUSE, NOTHING FOR MEN."

The national democratic convention has healed the wounds of the party, by acting on Col. Benton's impressive aphorism—so easily admitted in theory, so difficult to adopt in practice. Every member of the convention has surrendered his favorite for the presidency, and all united on one who was not a candidate for the station, and it is remarkable that the friends of that man who had the highest pretensions—who was nominated, in fact, by the democracy of almost every State, with singular unanimity, and whose majority, as voted in the convention, approached that of the arbitrary two-thirds rule, were the first to sacrifice their favorite to conciliation and the cause of the country. The Hon. Benjamin Butler acting, no doubt, under the inspiration of his friend, Mr. Van Buren. Andrew that name, which the mass of the people had so fondly pronounced as the one, able, all others to be indicated, to restore the popular cause and the character of the country. But Mr. Van Buren had told his countrymen early in this struggle, which has been urged with such vehemence by some, who could not bear disappointment—their pretensions should never be a bar to the union of his party. When, therefore, Mr. Butler (after a night's calm had passed over the excitement of the first day) found that the will of the majority could not prevail, or, if it did, only after a prolonged strife, he felt it his duty to use the authority given him to redeem Mr. Van Buren's pledge. He led the way, by surrendering the highest pretensions, to the withdrawal of such as waged the contest against them, and thus produced the harmony and concert in the convention which we sincerely trust may pervade the party throughout the country, and insure its success. Mr. Van Buren always redeems his promises to the people. He never even cheats their expectations. He is always better than his word.

The nomination of Colonel Polk will, at first, be received as a disappointment by all who have embarked ardently in the support of the candidates heretofore, prominently; but a little cool reflection will convince every one who prefers the cause to his personal inclinations that, under the circumstances, this act of the convention was judicious—was, in truth, necessary to the salvation of the party. The dissension had gone too far in the convention to be settled by the triumph of any one under whose flag it was conducted. Col. Polk had at no time any share in them; and in other respects he is perfectly unexceptionable. He is a man of ability, unquestioned probity, untiring industry, and sound judgment, guarded by an ever-vigilant prudence. He is well versed in public affairs; and has always, in his conduct, shown a high regard for the principles of democracy. In all points of principle and policy, he has been a resolute and firm antagonist of Mr. Clay. If, therefore, the mere personal preference of our party be discarded, no man could have been selected better suited to the occasion.

There are particular circumstances in the choice of Colonel Polk which reconcile us to the loss of our greatest favorite. He is a Tennesseean; and the attitude of an all-absorbing topic in that section will enable him to achieve success in that State, and give the old hero of the Hermitage the satisfaction of witnessing the return of his beloved Tennessee to the Democratic fold, before he closes his earthly career. This consideration, we have no doubt, will make amends to Mr. Van Buren for any regret he might feel at the self-sacrifice he has so nobly made, and in some degree alleviate the mortification—which a mind tenderly alive to his is to any thing that looks like a condemnation passed on him by the party to which he has devoted his life, must experience in seeing the almost universal verdict of the people in his favor turned against him by the people's convention. But we know that Mr. Van Buren would rather see a ray of joy gild the evening of the life of his venerable friend of the Hermitage, than achieve a new triumph for himself.

We refer to the letter of our correspondent, which will surely come, to-night, for the particulars of the nomination.

DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CONVENTION.
BALTIMORE, 5 o'clock, a. m.,
May 29, 1844.

Sir: I see by your paper that no letter reached you from here last evening. I do not wonder at it, as everything seemed to be going wrong with us; and I suppose the postmaster here sent the letters wrong also, or did wrong by not mailing them. Everything goes right to-day; and I will write in time, and carry my letter right to you.

Last evening was the darkest, I thought, I ever saw, politically; and this morning was not better; to all appearances. It was said this morning, that the friends of Colonel Johnson would go over to Cass, but that they were not numerous enough to nominate him, and their going over would create a bad feeling, with some of the other delegations, and make matters worse. The convention met at 9 o'clock, a. m., and soon afterwards the balloting commenced; and, sure enough, the 21 friends of Col. Johnson, who voted for him on the last ballot last evening, voted for Cass. But 30 others who voted for Cass last evening, voted for others this morning; and so the first ballot for Cass this morning was nine short of what the last one was for him last night. The first ballot this morning was as follows: Cass, 114; Van Buren 104; Polk 44; Calhoun 2; and Buchanan 2. Mained (of the ballot, by giving Polk eight of her nine votes; and N Hamshire followed giving him her whole six votes. The ballance to make up the forty-four was given by Tennessee, which had, at every previous balloting, I believe given her thirteen votes for Cass, and by what may be termed scattering votes. I heard one of the delegates from Maine say, just before the balloting commenced, that he would draw the fire of Tennessee to Polk by voting for him; and, sure enough, it had the effect desired or intended by him.

The second ballot commenced like the first, and so went on until New York was called, when her delegation withdrew to consult. When they returned, B. F. Butler, esq., a delegate from the sixth district of New York, made a very eloquent speech, which consumed some fifteen or twenty minutes, and concluding by withdrawing the name of Mr. Van Buren from the list of candidates. He said he had in his pocket, ever since the convention met, a letter from Mr. Van Buren, authorizing his name to be withdrawn whenever he (Mr. Butler) might think the harmony of the party required it; and I understood Mr. Butler to say that he had never informed his colleagues that he had such a letter. All of the New York delegates then voted for Polk, except Colonel Young, who voted a blank; but, before all the other States were called, Colonel Young gave his for Colonel Polk. After New York gave her full vote for Polk, some other States, that had scattered part of their votes, "corrected"; them, and gave their entire votes for him. A few "corrections" were made by States which voted after New York.

When it was thought all the States had voted, and voted unanimously for Colonel Polk, (though the fact was that Missouri and two or three States had not voted,) a gentleman from Maryland arose—his name I do not remember—and said, in a doquent manner, that nothing now was wanting but one absent sister to complete the harmony of the party. As he sat down, Mr. F. W. Pickens and Mr. Franklin Elmore, of South Carolina, both rose from their seats, and indicated that the absent sister was there, and would gladly do all in her power to perfect the harmony of the party. As soon as this was understood, every person in the room, I believe, rose from his seat; and such waving of handkerchiefs and cheering I never saw or heard before.

When the joy subsided, a little, Mr. Pickens was invited to the platform on which the president sat; and there, amidst deafening cheers, he assured the democratic party that South Carolina was with them, and would show the whig party of his State to be as "few and far between" as milestones. When he had concluded, Mr. Elmore addressed the delegates from the same platform, and gave to them the same assurance. I felt for him when he commenced, believing that he must fall in immeasurable distance below Mr. Pickens; but when, or even before, he had concluded, my fear vanished.

They did not consider themselves authorized to give the vote of S. Carolina to nominate a candidate for the presidency; but they thought they could safely pledge the vote of the State for the nominee, which was more important. After the States had all been called through, it was found that

JAMES K. POLK, of Tennessee, had been unanimously nominated as the democratic candidate for the presidency, and the convention then took a recess, or adjourned, until 4 o'clock, p. m.

P. S. When I stepped here, I learned that Mr. Wright had been nominated for vice president, had received notice of his nomination by telegraph, and declined, through the same channel or mode of conveyance, to be a candidate for that office. Indeed, I understood in Baltimore that it had been intimated to Mr. Wright that it was the intention of the convention to nominate him for the presidency, and that he had written a letter to Lieutenant Governor Dickinson, a delegate from New York, declining to be considered a candidate for any office. I am sorry he did so; but I rejoice that we have such a man in our party.

Mr. CALHOUN, in his letter of 19th April to Mr. PAXENHAM, in reference to the slavery of the blacks in the United States, says: "It may in truth be assumed as a maxim, that two races differing so greatly, and in so many respects, cannot possibly exist together in the same country, where their numbers are nearly equal, without the one being subjected to the other." This maxim in the South is not only well understood and admitted, but is regarded as a truth of such vital importance, that there is no man of reflection who does not feel that our very existence is dependent on the preservation of our actual institutions, until time and circumstances may allow of the modification.

A striking illustration of this maxim we have now before our eyes in the actual condition of the Island of St. Domingo; not between the black and white races, for they have long since ceased to exist together, but between the blacks and mulattoes. Here the difference between the two races is much less than between the blacks and whites, yet we find that they cannot exist together without the one being subjected to the other. If the superior intelligence of the mulattoes, although their numbers were much smaller, than that of the blacks, had enabled them to retain the governing power in their own hands, and with the semblance of equality reducing the blacks to a servitude nearly as complete as they endured under their white masters. The tables are now turned—the blacks in their turn by their numbers have become masters. No alternative is left to the mulattoes, but flight or extermination. The two races cannot exist together on a footing of equality.

As respects the "open and honest efforts" of Lord Aberdeen and his government for the abolition of slavery, we have a specimen of their efforts in the Island of Cuba. An investigation is now going on in that Island which will trace to its source the causes of the late insurrection there; an insurrection so widely diffused, with so many ramifications and so skillfully combined, that had not the plot been prematurely disclosed, even the large military force on the Island, and the energy and decision of the Captain General, would have been inadequate to save from massacre a large proportion of the white population. The Island would have become a second St. Domingo; the friends of abolition in the North and in England would have hailed the event with rapture; and devoutly have offered up thanksgivings!

Who does not feel that these "open and honest efforts," these desires and constant exertions to procure the general abolition of slavery throughout the world, are acting directly and forcibly upon the black population, preparing the way for revolt and massacre? And yet the nation openly avowing these tents and boasting of her superior humanity, professes to entertain friendly intercourse with nations in which the relations of master and slave are maintained. Detestable hypocrisy! atrocious state policy!—New Orleans Bul.

A PROCLAMATION.
His Excellency Gov. FITZPATRICK, has appointed the third Friday in June, as a day of fasting and prayer throughout the State.

THE WHIG CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY AND VICE PRESIDENCY.

In speaking of the candidates nominated by the late Whig Baltimore Convention, the New York Herald of the 3rd inst., makes use of the following language:—

"Of Henry Clay, there is no necessity to speak a word. He is known not only in this country, but to the uttermost ends of the earth; and a few miles further, Theodore Prelinghuysen, little is known beyond the limits of New Jersey and the upper end of the city of New York, round about Washington square. Mr. Prelinghuysen has been a resident of this city for several years, and is a citizen of New York, and has taken an active part in a variety of movements in relation to slavery, abolition, morals, religion, learning, and Heaven knows what. Mr. Prelinghuysen is an out-and-out abolitionist, or at least he has been, and we suppose he still adheres to the same faith. In this respect, therefore, his connection with Mr. Clay may go far to soft down the asperities of the abolitionists in the free States, but it will certainly injure Mr. Clay in the Southern States to a very considerable extent. In other respects Mr. Prelinghuysen is a very respectable, moral and talented man, though somewhat dull and heavy. However, he will make a capital Vice President, if he succeeds in getting the abolition vote, and judging the opposition of the Southern States."

In referring the proceedings of this convention the Vicksburg Sentinel says that among the delegates Leverett Saltonstall, of Massachusetts, of Hartford Convention memory, S. F. Mann, of Rhode Island, Charles Paine, of Vermont, John B. Ayer, of New Jersey, and Jacob Burnet, of Ohio, are notorious abolitionists and, no doubt, others not quite so well known. It is not to be wondered that these men should endeavor to put one of their own complexions on the ticket, in order to secure success in parts of the country where otherwise the abolition vote might be lost.

Montgomery Advertiser.

PHILADELPHIA.—The city is quite tranquil. A boy has been lately committed for riot and arson in Kensington. On Wednesday, after Judge Parsons, of the Court of Quarter Sessions, had charged the Grand Jury in relation to the recent riots, Col. C. S. Jack, who was one of the speakers of the Native American meeting the Washington market, in Kensington, on Tuesday afternoon, the 7th instant, sent a letter to the Grand Jury, commenting upon the Judge's charge, and giving his views of the riots, and of the legal duties of the Grand Jury in the premises. The communication was immediately transmitted to the Court, when Judge Parsons sent for Mr. Jack, and after addressing him in the strongest terms of reprehension as to his conduct, held him to bail in $500 to answer the charge of embezzlement.

Mr. Jack demanded to know the nature and from of the charge to which he was to answer, before he was called upon to enter bail.

Judge Parsons.—There is information here to this effect, upon the oath of twelve men, which is amply sufficient for the Attorney General to form a bill from.

Mr. Jack.—Before consenting to enter bail, I request to send to my friend, David Paul Brown, to advise with him.

Judge Parsons.—You can send for what counsel you please, but you must enter bail before you leave this courtroom, or I shall order a commitment to be made out.

Robert J. Arundel, Esq., rose and said he was ready and willing to enter bail in the case; but suggested to his Honor that perhaps he had not attentively examined the communication.

Judge Parsons.—I have read it with much care and attention, but with far greater surprise; and I intend to submit it to the other members of the court, that they may consider the propriety (which I myself have the right and power to do) of striking the name of Mr. Jack from the list of attorneys of this court.

Mr. Jack.—I am always ready to defend myself in any course which I have ever thought proper to adopt; but after the threat which your Honor has made—

Judge Parsons.—No threat has been made; none whatever: I shall now say nothing further upon the subject except that bail must be given immediately.

Mr. Arundel then entered the necessary recognizance, and he and Mr. Jack left the courtroom.

PHILADELPHIA.—The quiet and order of Philadelphia continue to be preserved. The military remain on duty at various points of the city and districts.

The U. S. Gazette has the following:

The mayor of the city, it will be perceived, has offered a reward of a thousand dollars for the detection of the person or persons who set fire to St. Augustine's Church on Wednesday night, and one hundred dollars for the conviction of any person who participated, more or less actively, in the riot in the vicinity of the church.

It may be proper to state, for the information of persons at a distance, that the other acts of arson, and the murders, were committed beyond the limits of the city proper. We know that arguments were yesterday morning being made to apply to the Governor for a similar proclamation with reference to the disturbances in Kensington, including the atrocious murders, as well as the burning of the dwellings, schoolhouse and church.

THE RUINS.—We saw, on Saturday, the ruins in Kensington, the blackened and crumbled walls of the Church, of the School House, and of many, very many dwelling houses, that the passions of men had doomed to destruction. The heart sickens at such exhibitions, and inquires for the justice of man, that allowed of such unlawful, unruly violence; or the justice of Heaven, which seemed to sleep amid the wrong doings of the wicked, both when the murders were committed, and the property wasted. We learned nothing there to answer that inquiry, but returning by the way of Fourth street, we went up and stood amid the smouldering ruins of St. Augustine; and we renewed our inquiry, our eye rested on the uppermost portion of the opposite wall, from which the fire had peoled every particle of plastering, and licked off the decorative paint; but as if in defiance of the wrath of Heaven, and the fury of the flames, there stood, uninjured letters, the inscription—

"THE LORD SERRA." And we turned away satisfied in our heart, and exclaiming, in quiet submission, "Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?"

CONGRESS.

The Senate, to-day, after passing upon several private bills, took up the resolution fixing the 17th of June for the adjournment of the present session of Congress, sine die; when, on the motion of Mr. Sevier, its further consideration was, by a vote on yeas and nays, of 24 to 21, postponed till Friday next. The Senate then resumed the consideration of the resolution of the Committee on finance for the indefinite postponement of the bill introduced by Mr. McDuffie to reduce the rate of duties under the present tariff to the standard of the compromise act. Mr. Atcherson spoke out the remainder of the day's session upon the subject, making an able argument in opposition to the prohibitory policy of the present tariff, by which the labor employed in every other branch of industry is taxed to foster a hot-bed system of domestic manufactures. Mr. Rives intimated a desire to address the Senate on the subject; and, at his suggestion, the Senate adjourned till Monday at 11 o'clock.

This private bill day, the House went into Committee of the whole on the Private Calendar, and acted on such bills as did not give rise to debate, and reported a number of them favorably to the House. Mr. Pratt introduced a joint resolution, which its first and second readings, providing that the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to cause to be divided into lots, and to sell at public auction or otherwise, the reservations to the north and south of the Capitol, or any of the lots that remain unsold at this time, for the purpose of defraying the expense of fencing and laying out the walks, and planting the trees in Monument Square, in order to complete the plan proposed by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds; and that the Washington Monument Society be permitted to erect thereon their monument, under the direction of the President of the United States; and that the said Commissioner shall sell, under a condition that at least a three-story brick, marble, or granite building shall be erected within five years after the sale, of all lots contiguous to or near the Capitol.

ONLY WAITING FOR THE WORD.—The Democrats throughout the country are "in arms and eager for the fray." It is only for the Democratic National Convention to appoint the Captain that is to lead to victory, and the people are ready to follow. Accounts from Maine assure us that the Democrats of that State are of good heart, and await the result of the Democratic National Convention, with much interest, determined to carry Maine for the nominee by a strong and decisive majority. The same spirited tone we hear daily from all parts of the country. The great mass of the people—the democrats—have imitated the old Tar, who, when asked under what captain he was about to enlist, said: "Any captain that will lead to victory—I fight for the glory and success of the cause, not for the elevation and glory of any man."

(Domestic Letter of the Herald & Tribune.)
NEW YORK, MAY 18.

The European steamer has been out fourteen days to date. We expect her along to-morrow or next day. Her accounts will be interesting, principally as they regard the cotton market, and the disposition of the English press, regarding the Texas treaty. The information of this measure had been received only two days before the sailing of the Hibernia, and from indications then at work, it is expected to produce no inconsiderable stir. The court gossip, which some of our statesmen dread so much, will not doubt be busy, and after some of their letters shall have been read there, we have no doubt they will get up some "opinion" for the special occasion.

In Danville, in this state, we have had a riot, after the Philadelphia fashion, "in little." Some of the citizens therein petitioned the legislature at its recent session to have the canal thereabouts diverted into a course different from that which it is now taking. The bill introduced for the purpose was laid on the table.—This was intolerable, and straightway they gathered together, with pickaxes and spades, and commenced digging at the banks, with a full determination to cut them down. The water by this means was drawn off and many boats were left high and dry on the ground.—Attempts were made by the canal men to repair the injury, but the mob assembled and drove them away. This was done repeatedly with a similar result, and at the last accounts the mob had forcible possession of the Presbyterian Church, the bell of which was used to summon the malcontents together. How the matter will end is not known.—The scoundrel violators of law seem to have a most decided penchant for churchward. Unlike their brother scoundrels of Philadelphia, however, they have taken to Presbyterianism, instead of Catholicism.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN NEW ORLEANS.

We regret to see in the Daily Picayune an account of the most destructive fire that ever has taken place in New Orleans. We have no room to give the details. On squares, containing between 200 and 300 houses, was destroyed. It began at the Northwest corner of Franklin and Jackson Streets, swept the latter between Canal and Common streets, and crossed Tremé, Marais Villero and Robertson to Claiborne. Montgomery Advertiser.

THE SANCTIFICATION.

In the progress of a speech which Judge Spencer made at Albany a few evenings since, he took occasion to observe, in substance, that whatever faults Mr. Clay had in himself or in his morality, either political or personal, his nomination was "sanctified by the name of Freelinghuysen." Mr. Spencer, it will be recollected, presided at the Baltimore Clay Convention. It will also be recollected that he was an old bluelight Federalist during the last war, and has never changed since that time. It is precisely the same with Freelinghuysen. He is a Federalist of the deepest blue, a bigoted sectarian, and was at the head of the project for stopping the mails on Sunday, so signally defeated by Richard M. Johnson. So the nomination of Henry Clay is "sanctified" and baptised in Federalism, bigotry and monopolies.

Let us see how all this will look in the songs and verses, of which we are hourly in the receipt, after this fashion.

THE BANE AND ANTIDOTE.

Henry Clay he is the pisen,
The antidote is Freelinghuysen.

SANCTIFICATION OF GAMBLING.

Though Clay deals his cards all over the nation,
And cleans his friend's purse out at play,
No matter for that it is sanctification;
To yoke Freelinghuysen with Clay.

HENRY CLAY—declares in his letter accepting the nomination of the Whig convention for the Presidency, that he does so, because he believes it to be in conformity with the will of a majority of the people of the United States. The bravado and hypocrisy couched in this modest acceptance, cannot escape unnoticed. He declares himself the choice of the people, whereby he would discourage the luke-warm and deter the timid among his opponents, and animate the hopes and enkindle the enthusiasms of his supporters.

And, he affects that he accepts in obedience to the popular will. Now, his whole public course shows an utter disregard of public opinion when in conflict with his private interests or his passions. His support of the U. S. Bank in 1816, and of the Compromise act in 1818, his vote for J. Q. Adams in 1825, and his vote against the repeal of the Bankrupt Act in 1842,—all evince an inattention to the will of the majority, to which he owes, and affects allegiance. Did he think he was the choice of a majority of the freemen of the United States in 1824, when beaten by Jackson, Adams and Crawford, or in 1832, when distanced by Gen. Jackson, for the Presidency? Or did he run then, as now, to gratify his self-love?

Huntsville Democrat.

THE PUBLIC LANDS.—We learn, says the Philadelphia Inquirer, from an official source, that the sales of the public lands, during the last calendar year, amounted to 1,639,674 acres, and produced more than $2,000,000, exceeding the proceeds of the sales for the previous year, by more than $600,000.

The commissioner, under date of December 14, 1843, says: "There have been surveyed, since my last annual report, upwards of four millions and a half of acres, exclusive of private land claims, and some surveys where the field notes were lost or destroyed by fire. In the South and Southwest the surveys are extending to the farthest point, and in the Northwest are progressing with the extinguishment of the Indian title. These surveys, with the exception of private land claims, will, of course, form the basis of the sales for the year 1844. On the establishment of the boundary line between this country and Texas, under the convention of 25th April, 1829, it was ascertained that some of our surveys and sales were within the Texan territory; and orders have been given to the surveyor General of Louisiana to correct his surveys, so as to limit them to the true boundary, and make due returns thereof to this office, so that proper measures may be taken to refund the purchase money in all cases of sales thus erroneously made."

From Africa.—The Philadelphia North American gives the subjoined items from Sierra Leone Watchman of March 7th, received at the office of that paper: "The prospects of the mission (Wesleyan) continued to increase, and 841 souls had joined that body the fifteen months preceding 1st January. The French men of war were in the harbor, with a view to select a suitable place on the coast for a settlement. The Brazilian schr. "L'Egeria" was run ashore while chased by the man-of-war Spy, near Appe, and was destroyed by her captors. "The Helena," master unknown, embarked 546 slaves at Ambriz, 128 of whom died on the passage. She was taken by H. M. sloop Espoir, and was condemned January 6. "The Imperatrice." This Brazilian brigantine sailed from Rio de Janeiro for Campos, and was taken by the Heroine. She was not defended, and was condemned on the 10th January.

NORSE CONDUCT.—During the great fire on Saturday, a young man named Thomas Karney, an apprentice of Mr. Seates, saved a little infant from the devouring flames by his gallant and daring conduct. The mother of the child had laid it on the floor of her dwelling, while she was engaged in moving some articles of value, the fire then being some distance. She was only absent a very few minutes, but on returning, what was her agony to behold the building containing the darling of her heart enveloped in flames.

Karney hearing that the child was in the burning house, rushed in regardless of danger, found the little one unconscious of harm and playing with a rattle, and quickly returned and placed it in the arms of its agitated mother, uninjured. Such deeds as this deserve more than a passing notice. There is not a mother in the land who will not invoke blessings on the generous & gallant youth.—[N. O. Tropic.

RAPIDITY OF THE LONDON PRESS.—The great speech which Mr. O'Connell made, at the banquet in Covent Garden theatre, was published and circulated in the room in print ten minutes after its delivery.

State's Evidence. A good story is told of Geo. White, a notorious thief in Massachusetts. He was once arraigned for horse stealing, when it was supposed that he was connected with an extensive band, which was laying contributions on all the stables round. White was offered large inducements to reveal his associates, all of which he declined; until an assurance from the court was obtained that he should be discharged if he would turn on his comrades. The jury returned a verdict of "not guilty," when he was called upon for his promised revelations. "I shall be faithful to my word," said he, "understand that the devil is the only accomplice I ever had—we have been a great while in partnership—you have acquitted me, and you may hang him if you can catch him."

A PRACTICAL CUSTOMER.—Col. McMahon of the Memphis Inquirer, tells the following excellent story of a son of the Emerald Isle:—"May it please your honor," said a stout looking Irishman one morning not long ago at the door of the Mayor's office, "may it please yer honor, here's them three dollars I'm owing y'r worship."

The mayor did not remember having any claim against the man, and requested him to explain.

"Och, thin, and an't three dollars the price for breaking" the corporation law over the face and eyes of a dirty spalpeen—when you pitch into him, y'r honor, you know?"

The Mayor understood the case at once. There had been a fight, and the principle offender, fearing a warrant, had determined to evade the tax of constable fees, &c. About this time the Recorder stepped in and having received the money, began to make the entry in his book.

A thought seemed to strike our combatant.

"Suppose, y'r Honor, I make it five, would y'r worship give me the privilege? It will save trouble, you know!"

What do you mean by "privilege?"

"The law to pitch into the spalpeen again if he don't kape himself asy y'r Honor!"

We left the mayor explaining why "privileges" of that kind could not be granted and went to our breakfast.

At the latest accounts from the west, the rivers there were all rising with great rapidity. The Red River Republican of the 18th inst., contains an account of a great overflow and immense loss of property on Red River. The town of Alexandria was under water; the levees had given way in several places, and much farther damage was anticipated. The loss sustained by the planting interest on the river is stated to be not less than a million and a half of dollars.

The bell of St. Augustine's at Philadelphia, which melted and fell in the flames of the burning church during the riots last week, was the old bell which first chimed musical peals at the declaration of American Independence—the dawning of freedom, political and religious, upon the Union.—Tribune.

A writer of a love tale in describing his heroine, says: "innocence, dwells in the rich curls of her dark hair." We should think it stood a pretty smart chance of being combed out.

"Oh woman!"—said the celebrated Washington Alston, in that strange Italian tale, "Monaldi"—"when thy heart is pure, and thy love true, what is there in nature to match thee! Though he whom thou lovest becomes maimed, wasted by disease, or blighted by madness—yet will thou cling to him, and see in the ruin only that image which he first left in that heart!"

Unpopular. A man run for Congress in one of the Western States, who was so unpopular that he did not receive a single vote. He could not be prevailed on even to vote for himself.

With the voice of each bird's sweet song.
O, loved ones and kind and warm-hearted,
Beneath the old roof-tree that met—
In the world's chilly crowd we are parted—
Yet say, do they think of us yet?

GEORGE M. DALLAS.

From the Democratic Review, Feb., 1841.

Mr. Dallas was born in the city of Philadelphia on the 10th day of July, 1792. He is the elder son of Alexander J. Dallas, one of the most accomplished advocates and distinguished statesmen that have adorned the legal profession of the United States, or sustained, in important posts of public trust, the principles and policy of the republican party. He received the rudiments of his education at a school in Germantown, and afterwards at the Friends Academy in Philadelphia. At the age of 14, he was entered in Princeton College, and continued there until 1810, when he was graduated with the highest honors of his class. He delivered their valedictory address, which is still remembered and adverted to in the college history as a striking example of feeling, eloquence, and taste. Indeed, as a public speaker, he gave early promise of that excellence which has since been displayed in many of the prominent situations to which his talents have elevated him; and a published oration, delivered when he was but seventeen years of age, and preserved in the Post Folio, strikingly attests the maturity of his powers.

On leaving college, Mr. Dallas commenced the study of the law, in the office of his father, at Philadelphia; and although, in the intervals of that severe study, the more attractive forms of literature and poetry were not unfrequently cultivated, he yet persevered with unceasing application in making himself a thorough master of the great principles of the profession of which he has since been so distinguished a member. He was admitted to the bar in 1813. Soon after the declaration of war with England, he had enrolled himself in a volunteer corps; and when, in the year 1813, Mr. Gallatin was appointed by President Madison, a member of commission that repaired to St. Petersburg, for the purpose of negotiating a peace under the mediation of the emperor Alexander, he accompanied that minister as his private and confidential secretary. During a residence of more than a year in Europe, Mr. Dallas had an opportunity of visiting Russia, France, England, Holland, and the Netherlands. While in England, a family connection with Lord Byron brought him into frequent association with that great poet, who then, at twenty-five years of age, was receiving in London the general and enthusiastic admiration which the appearance of his two beautiful poems, the Giaour and the Bride of Abydos, could not fail to call forth. It was in consequence of a remark of Mr. Dallas, upon the popularity in America of Childe Harold, and some of his previous poems, that he declared in his journal, that these were the first things that ever sounded in his ears like fame; and that popularity in a far and rising country, caused things very different from the ephemeral praises of the crowd of fashion then buzzing around him. Through another relative, the humane and eloquent jurist who was then the chief justice of the court of common pleas, it was Mr. Dallas's good fortune to be thrown, not unfrequently, into the society of some of those eminent lawyers who have, by the brilliancy of their genius, and devotion to philanthropy, made their profession yet more distinguished than it was in previous days. Romilly, whose beneficence flowed in a current so transparent, copious, and strong; Brougham, with his far-reaching, inquisitive, and undaunted utilitarianism; Mackintosh, who could wisely and kindly apply to the heated actions, and in the busy forums of men, the rules of conduct which he had deduced in the patent reflections of a guileless life, these were men whose society, even transiently enjoyed by one much younger, could not fail to leave impressions equally permanent, useful, and gratifying.

In August, 1814, Mr. Dallas returned to the United States, bearing the despatches from the American commissioners then holding their sessions at Ghent, which announced the prospects little favorable to a speedy peace that are known to have resulted from the earlier conferences with the British envoys. On his arrival, he found his father transferred from the bar of Philadelphia to the head of the Treasury Department—a post requiring, in the complicated state of the finances, and amid the pressing exigencies of the war, all the resources of judgment and talent for which he had been already distinguished, but which he was now destined to display through a brilliant administration of two years, under circumstances and in a manner that secured for him a yet larger share of the applause and confidence of the people of the United States. His son remained with him for a time at Washington, to assist him in the arduous duties of the treasury, and then returned to Philadelphia, to resume, or rather to commence, the actual practice of his profession—an event that was almost immediately followed by his marriage with an accomplished lady, the daughter of Mr. Nicklin, an eminent merchant of that city.

The death of his father, which occurred shortly after he retired from the administration of the Treasury Department, took from Mr. Dallas, in the outset of his career at the bar, not merely the benefit of professional assistance seldom equalled, but those kind and endearing associations which could have grown up only in intercourse with one whose genius was not more brilliant than his affections were warm. Self-dependent, however, he applied himself with the more ardor to the practice of the law; and being appointed, in 1817, the deputy of the Attorney General in the city of Philadelphia, he soon gave evidence of that skill in conducting criminal cases which has since always distinguished his occasional attention to that branch of his profession. When, in the following year, charges were introduced into the assembly of Pennsylvania against Governor Findlay, which resulted in a legislative investigation, Mr. Dallas acted as his counsel; and the firmness and ability which he displayed throughout the whole proceeding, placed him at once, by general consent, in a rank in his profession, that has seldom been attained by so young an advocate.

It is scarcely necessary to remark, that the exigencies of a legal life could not withdraw Mr. Dallas from the deepest interest in political topics. Deriving from the conduct and counsels of his father, and from the association of his earliest youth, as well as those of later years, a strong attachment to the principles and views of the democratic party, he had never failed to co-operate with his fellow-citizens in the measures which were calculated to advance them. The more tranquil administration of Mr. Monroe, succeeding to the fierce political conflicts which existed during the war with England, did not present many questions that rallied party controversies on national affairs; but the election of Governor Heister in Pennsylvania had brought the federal party into power in that State, after a long period of democratic ascendancy; and no one embarked with more zeal than Mr. Dallas in endeavoring to effect the restoration of the policy which he believed to be essential to a sound and just administration of the affairs of the Commonwealth. These efforts resulted in the triumphant re-election of Governor Shulze, the candidate of the democratic party.

But while unanimity, followed by success, thus attended the course of his political associates in the State, the elements of division among the democracy of the Union began to be apparent regard to the individual who was to succeed Mr. Monroe. Early personal associations, as well as a just appreciation of his distinguished talents, had led Mr. Dallas to unite with a large portion of his political friends in Pennsylvania in a desire that the vote of the State should be given to Mr. Calhoun; and the success with which that statesman had conducted the administration of the War Department for the eight previous years seemed to give a certain pledge, notwithstanding his comparative youth, of the ability he would display in any executive office to which the voice of his countrymen should call him. When, however, the general sentiment of the republican party throughout the Union expressed a desire to confer on the venerable patriot who had so long and so faithfully maintained their principles in various posts of civil trust, and so brilliantly augmented the glory of his country in the field of battle, Mr. Dallas, with sentiments towards General Jackson in which the friends of Mr. Calhoun in Pennsylvania at once participated, took the lead in suggesting that the younger candidate should be presented to the American people for the second office, while the united and harmonious voice of the democratic party should name General Jackson for the presidential chair. In every measure that resulted from this determination, Mr. Dallas bore a prominent part: the eloquent address in which the democratic convention of the State presented their reasons for the course they had adopted, is generally understood to have proceeded from his pen; and when, in November, 1824, the unusually large majority of more than thirty thousand democratic votes showed the enthusiastic feeling of the people of the State, there were few among them whose zeal had been more honorably and actively displayed than his in producing that gratifying result.

The choice of the House of Representatives having given the presidency to Mr. Adams, the succeeding four years only contributed to create the yet stronger concentration of public opinion in favor of General Jackson; and when he obtained, in 1828, the suffrages of fifteen States, the majority in Pennsylvania had been increased beyond fifty thousand. It was during this interval, that Mr. Dallas received from the people of his native city an honorable mark of their confidence by an election to the majority—an office which for many years past has, in consequence of the usual ascendancy of the federal party, been seldom bestowed upon a person of his political opinions. On the election of General Jackson, he was selected by him as the chief representative of the executive government of the Union in the same city, by being appointed to the office of district attorney of the United States. To the same post his father had been appointed by Mr. Jefferson, through the whole of whose administration he continued to fill it, and from that office Mr. Madison called him to the head of the treasury. His son occupied that post for a much shorter period; but, in the two years during which he discharged its duties, several cases of public interest and considerable magnitude gave full scope to his abilities, and contributed their share to his reputation as a professional man, which each year continued to augment.

At length, in the year 1831, a vacancy having occurred in the representation from Pennsylvania in the Senate of the United States, the legislature selected Mr. Dallas to fill that honorable post. Thus, in entering for the first time a legislative body, he found himself in the highest and most important assembly that exists under the provisions of the American constitution. A new field was given to his talents as a statesman and an orator. Having at the bar of Philadelphia few equals in forensic eloquence, and being perhaps without a rival on any occasion of public, and especially political discussion, he was now required to match himself with men trained by exercise, as well as possessed of distinguished ability, in a sphere which forbade the logical precision of a court, and yet could scarcely call forth or permit the animated current of spontaneous declamation, so often successfully indulged in the lesser assemblies of his fellow-citizens. His speeches in the Senate of the United States, throughout the period that he remained there, were heard with attention that gave evidence of his complete success. Those that have been more carefully reported, display, on a variety of topics, striking political views; and they abound with passages of animated eloquence. The most interesting subject of general discussion was that which marked the winters of 1832 and 1833 more memorable in our legislative history than any period since the war with England. The principles on which a revision of the tariff of duties was to be made, gave rise, in the former session, to warm and long debates, which, in the following one, led to those that involved the serious question of right of one or more of the States to nullify a law making such revision on principles that it might regard as contrary to the provisions of the constitution. On both occasions, Mr. Dallas took part in these debates. On the former, after an eloquent picture of the situation and resources of the United States, he touched with a powerful, but friendly spirit, the various causes to which, independently of the policy of protection generally advocated by the northern statesman, might be imputed the distresses that were supposed peculiar to affect and injure the agriculture of the South. Following, then, the course of general opinion, as well as the declared policy of Pennsylvania, as evidenced in the repeated votes of her legislature, he presented, in a manner not often surpassed in force and clearness, by those who have treated the matter in the same light, views then entertained on the best mode of adjusting the delicate question, so as to save the South from any real injury, and yet preserve from destruction the labor and pursuits of the northern and middle States. When the heightened excitement of the following year produced that gloomy epoch in our fraternal annals, which was marked by serious discussions on the extent of force that the general government might exert upon the opposing laws of the State; and the consequent actions of her authorities and people, he sustained that power in the Union which he believed to be essential to its preservation, and warranted by the spirit and terms of the contract, but deprecated, in so doing, every measure not clearly necessary for those objects. On all questions appearing to involve any differences of policy or interest among the States, Mr. Dallas appears uniformly to have leaned to that course which he deemed most calculated, even at some sacrifice, to preserve the harmony of the whole.

On the 3d of March, 1833, the term expired for which he had been elected to the Senate. At his own request, his name was withheld from the legislature as a candidate for re-election. He was desirous to return to the bar, from which such an occupation necessarily withdrew him; and his doing so was speedily followed by his appointment to an office, whose duties, while not unconnected with politics, were far more in accordance with his professional pursuits. He was selected by Governor Wolf as the attorney general of his native State; and he continued to hold it with increasing reputation, and with a degree of approbation and confidence on the part of the whole community never exceeded, nor often equalled, until the change in the executive administration of the State, by the election of Governor Ritner, of course induced him to withdraw.

Mr. Dallas had scarcely retired to private life, when he was made the object of one of the most remarkable proceedings that have ever characterized the political course of the party opposed to democratic principles during any of the intervals of their temporary ascendancy. Under the pretext of inquiring into the character and acts of secret associations, several of the leading members of the republican party were summoned to Harrisburg in the middle of the winter, and, in defiance of the positive provisions of the constitution of the State, a right was assumed by a committee of the legislature to investigate their private and social conduct as members of masonic societies. Of the persons subjected to this strange inquisition, Mr. Dallas was one. He obeyed the summons issued under the apparent sanction of the House of Representatives, and appeared before the committee; but when asked to take the oath by which he was required virtually to acknowledge the right of instituting an inquisition so unheard of, into the private and harmless conduct of himself and his associates, he refused, in a short but most impressive address, and displayed, in terms that led to the abortive termination of the disreputable affair, its injustice, illegality, and folly. He perceived, on the occasion, the secret operations that soon ripened to so fatal a result, by which the rank of the United States was impugned, by corrupt and dishonest means, on the people of the United States, and especially of Pennsylvania, as a State institution. He lent the aid of his influence and talents to resist it while he remained at Harrisburg; and on his return to Philadelphia, awakened his democratic brethren in public discussions, to a full sense of the danger whose near approach had been carefully concealed. The history of this measure, and the means by which its success was achieved, if not yet developed in all their details, are yet generally known. In consequence of it, the State was plunged into the long train of disasters from which its citizens have not yet been able to extricate themselves, and of which the direct, extending far beyond their immediate objects, have produced the most deplorable results on the business, prosperity, and even character of the American people. Even after the shackles had been fixed, Mr. Dallas was among those who sought to relieve the community from so fatal a thralldom. Taking advantage of the approaching convention, when the people of the State were to meet with every attribute of original sovereignty not restrained by the constitution of the United States, and of which the assembly was promulgated by the vote of the people before the act in question was passed, he called to the consideration of the State, in an able and eloquent letter, the propriety of examining into the frauds that had been perpetrated, and relieving the Commonwealth, by an edict of that body, from all fraudulent invasions of its rights, due care being taken to protect and indemnify individuals concerned in the institution from any pecuniary loss.

The political history of the following winter was marked by the election of Mr. Van Buren to the presidency; and one of the earliest of his acts was to offer to Mr. Dallas the post of envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Russia. In that country he remained till October, 1839. The only portion of his official correspondence, while there, that has been made public is his discussion with Count Nesselrode relative to the territories and commercial intercourse of the two nations on the coast of the Pacific ocean. It develops several points connected with the rights of the respective governments on those shores, presented with great clearness and interest, and destined, no doubt, at a day not very distant, to become subjects of still more general and minute examination. The claims and rights of the Americans are sustained with great ability and spirit. To those objects of inquiry which, in such a country as Russia, would naturally attract an intelligent mind, Mr. Dallas devoted great attention. Into its history, and a study of the habits, manners, and character of its people, he plunged with a natural enthusiasm, and collected a variety of facts tending to elucidate all these subjects. In a public address, delivered not long after his return to the United States, he sketched with a vivid and brilliant pen several of these topics; but it is to be hoped that, from the materials he has collected, a work of a more extensive kind may be hereafter given to the public. It is one which is rendered peculiarly interesting from the nature of the friendly relations that have existed, and that circumstances will probably long preserve. He remarked with great truth, in the address referred to, that "such, for more than half a century, has been the strenuousness and perversity of other international pretensions, that this republic and that despotism, though widely separated, recognised the wisdom of closely cementing their mutual amity. The freedom of the seas, the rights of neutrality, the searchless shelter of the flag, were early links of sympathy and confidence which the forecast of Mr. Jefferson strove to rivet. To those ties are since added others, springing mainly from a common consciousness that while there can seldom, if ever be points of enmity, their geographical relation on opposite flanks of rival and ambitious powers, their declared friendship a vast efficiency in discouraging assaults or encroachments upon their own security, pursuits, and independence. It is but a reasonable curiosity which seeks to understand a nation, more likely than any other to be the permanent and pacific ally of the United States.

Since Mr. Dallas's return from Russia, he has devoted himself exclusively to the practice of his profession; and though it is generally understood, that not long after that, a seat in his cabinet was tendered to him by Mr. Van Buren, he has, so far, adhered to his determination to remain in private life. That he will be long permitted to do so, we cannot think, unless he shall strenuously resist the wishes and the judgment of his fellow-citizens. To the confidence reposed in him, founded in his adherence, from earliest youth, to the accepted doctrines of the republican party on every great national question, he adds a brilliancy of genius, a spotless personal life, and qualities so calculated to win the affection and regard of all with whom he is called into association, that his native State, placing him as she does in the highest class of her favorite sons, will scarcely consent that the ripe years of his life shall be withdrawn altogether from her service, and that of the people of the United States. Adorning and filling, as he would with eminent distinction, the most exalted offices that his fellow-citizens can bestow, their hope is certainly as general as it is reasonable, and just, that none of the accidents which hang upon all human footsteps may withhold him from the honorable discharge of those public duties which are conferred, by the willing, images of a free people, upon those among them who have been found to be the most deserving.

In personal appearance and deportment, few men blend more simplicity and dignity; and as a public speaker, his manner is singularly prepossessing. Though not hasty or unusually rapid, his lively imagination and success in happy illustration give to his speeches, even when least premeditated, an attractive variety, aptness, and ease, and make him one of the most fortunate of orators in occasional addresses to popular bodies, as he has been one of the most successful in scenes requiring the highest talents for debate. To letters he is known to have always been as much devoted as the occupations of an otherwise active life would permit. His numerous political papers give evidence of an excellent style; and it is not many years since his occasional contributions in the various branches of elegant literature were to be found in the publications of the day. If the wish may be fairly indulged, that one whose public life has hitherto been so useful, may not be hereafter withdrawn from a participation in public affairs, the hope may be expressed with equal justice, that literature may yet receive from his pen many of those contributions, in which genius and taste are brought to illustrate the dictates of a judgment always enlightened, and the honest sentiments of a generous heart.

GREAT DEMOCRATIC MEETING IN NEW YORK.

A large meeting of the Democratic party, amounting to about 25,000 persons, assembled in the Park, New York city, on the 4th inst. The New York Herald speaks of it in the following language:

"On the whole, however, the occasion presented a formidable display of the numerical unity, determination, and vigor of the Democratic party of this city, and was in all respects superior to the Whig gathering for the purpose of receiving the nomination of Clay and Freminghuysen. It was indeed, a meeting every way calculated to alarm the Whigs—it was composed of the stern, hard working, unflinching old Democracy, whose quiet, subdued, but earnest mode of action tells at the polls, and does not evaporate in the blustering bravado of Tammany Hall."

Campbell P. White was appointed Chairman, and a long string of vice Presidents and Secretaries was appointed. The proceedings were such as to promise glorious results in the State of New York. We give the following specimen from the Speech of Mr. Gansevoort Melville:

"One thing—thank Heaven!—is true, true as holy writ, & that is—the leaders of the democratic party may waver, but the rank and file, the bone and sinew, the mechanism and the working man, the undisciplined manhood of the land, never waver; they don't know how to waver. (Tremendous cheering.) The voters of the democratic party have now but one alternative: Henry Clay and his obsolete idea of a United States Bank, a tariff based upon the principle of protection, a distribution of the proceeds of public lands, combined with a latitudinarian construction of the constitution and an anti-Texas and anti-Oregon bias—or James K. Polk, a determined opposition to the United States Bank and the policy of the land distribution—the maintenance of the veto power—a limited revenue tariff—the occupation of the Oregon—and—the re-annexation of the State of the lone star—gallant and fertile Texas—both occupation and re-annexation to take place at the earliest possible practicable moment. (Enthusiastic cheers, and cries for Texas.) The people will record their decision upon them. In that decision, whatever it may be, we have the utmost confidence. In it we will acquiesce. If we do but half as much for the cause as the cause will do for us, we will most assuredly triumph. (Cheers.) Let us go into this contest heart and hand, with an inveterate spirit of determination that causes its opponents to give ground. We do not recognize the existence of any such word as fail. (Cheers.) I have carefully examined the democratic dictionary, the last edition—1844—and there is no such word as fail in it. (Laughter and tremendous cheering.) To use a strong Saxon idiom, I feel it in my bones that we will beat them—(terrific cheering)—we will establish a permanent democratic ascendancy, under our chosen standard bearers, Polk and Dallas—(great cheering)—the accomplished Pennsylvanian, and the young Hickory tree of the great and growing West. (Great cheers.) The old Key stone has never furnished the Union with either President or Vice President, and it causes her to feel badly, and she cannot avoid complaining. But let her be easy and contented. She should not complain, for she is going to furnish one now. (Cheers.) As for James K. Polk, the next President of the United States, we, the untimely democracy of New York will re-baptize him; we will give him a name such as Andrew Jackson gained in the baptism of fire and blood at New Orleans; we will re-Christian him. Hereafter he shall be known by the name that we now give him—it is, Young Hickory. (Here the cheering was deafening, and continued for some moments. A voice, "you're a good twig of Old Hickory, too!"—laughter and renewed cheering.) We have had one old hickory tree. Its trunk is yet green and undecayed. Sixteen millions of Americans have reposed under its shade in peace and happiness. It is yet vigorous—but it cannot live for ever. And now to take its place is springing up at its very side, a tall and noble sapling. It inherits its nourishment from the soil. It flourishes in the same atmosphere. It springs from the same staunch old democratic stock. It is heart of oak and sound to the core. It grew originally upon the same Carolinian ground. Like it, it was early transplanted to the West. There it has struck its root wide and deep. It will yet be cradled in the tempest and rocked by the storm. Storm and tempest will alike beat against it in vain. Its growth cannot be checked. It is destined to reach a corruscating elevation with the parent stem. We and our children will yet live in prosperity under the broad branches of this one young Hickory tree. On the 4th day of March next, that young Hickory will be transplanted by the People, to the People's House at Washington, and you, and I, and all of us, will assist in that transplanting. (Enthusiastic and long continued cheering followed this very happy harangue.) We are going into this fight on the great and fundamental principle of a philosopher greater than any the groves of the Academy can boast—a native-born, home spun, and backwoods philosopher—David Crockett, (roars of laughter.)—the principle he has given to the world, has the advantage of combining in itself the sum and essence of all practical wisdom. "Be always sure you are right—then go ahead." We are sure that we are right—are we not? (Terrific cheering.) Well, then, we are right and we are right and we are going ahead, and all the federalism and whiggery in the land cannot stop us. (Cheers.) The indomitable democracy of New York, have by this overwhelming demonstration, set an example to the whole Union—and we call upon the democracy every where to respond to it in like spirit and in like manner. We now proclaim from what is left of the State of Maine—what Webster and Ashburton, and other highly respectable gentlemen have left of it—to Georgia, and from the Atlantic to the farthest confines of Oregon and Texas, that we are united and once more stand shoulder to shoulder. (Great cheering.) Past divisions are healed. Former animosities buried and forgotten. We are all brethren. Our only aim, our only endeavor in this coming conflict will be to emulate each other in penetrating furthest, and striking deepest into the ranks of the common enemy. (Cheers.) Our signal of battle is identical in spirit and almost in language with that which animated the haughty islander at Waterloo, when they rushed to that final and irresistible charge that sealed the fate of Europe. Let our war cry echo far and wide. The democratic war cry is—up, democrats, and at them. (Loud and enthusiastic cheering.) And "three cheers for Gansevoort Melville," which were given with terrific effect. Indeed, throughout his spirited Speech Mr. Melville was most warmly cheered, his appeal apparently going right home to the multitude and stirring up all the enthusiasm which in the early part of the proceedings seemed altogether absent."

A jolly jock-tar, rolling along Commercial street, in Boston, enquired what the Democratic nomination was, Polk and Dallas' says a by-stander, "Pork and Dollars!" says he, that's the ticket, something to eat and money in the pocket.

Being anxious to increase the circulation of our paper since the presidential campaign has commenced, and the candidates of the two great political parties are now fairly in the field, we propose to furnish our paper to new subscribers from the present time until the first day of January next, over six months for one dollar in advance. Our present patrons can also have their papers continued up to that time, upon the same terms, by closing their accounts either by payment or note.

✧ Send in your orders soon, but don't all speak at once.

It will be seen that the whigs in the Senate have defeated every proposition yet brought forward for the annexation of Texas, by almost a strict party vote, the last one, on Mr. Benton's proposition, with the exception of only one vote on each side. This is but another evidence of the identity of the old Federal party and the modern spurious whig party. The old Federal party opposed all measures for quieting the Indian troubles, the settlement of the western States, pre-emption laws, the acquisition of Louisiana, and the policy of Gen. Jackson, in removing the Indians; and now the modern whig party oppose the annexation of Texas from the same principles and the same motives.

DO WEARS THE COLLAR NOW?—
forth, while the present party distinction remains, there will be no difficulty in deciding which is the party devoted to principles and which to men. An unerring way-mark has been set up. The future enquirer need only be pointed to the course of the two parties on the question of the annexation of Texas in 1844. Both parties were fairly committed in favor of annexation, previous to the publication of the letters of Clay and Van Buren in opposition to it. The democratic party, when their principal favorite differed with them, went straight forward and chose a man who was not only with them on the Texas question, but upon every other principle to which they adhered. On the contrary, the main body of the whig party, at the bidding of their leader, turned aside with him. We say the main body, not all, for there were a number of noble exceptions, who have given incontestible evidence that they are not willing to follow their leader in opposing this measure so vitally important to the safety, best interest and prosperity of the South, and that, although they admire Mr. Clay much, yet they love their country more. Of this latter class, we are proud to say, we believe there are as many in this county, in proportion to the number of whigs, as any section we have heard from. The democratic party are now reaping the reward of inflexible adherence to that true and long-tried maxim, that "honesty is the best policy," while the whig party, (that portion who have followed Mr. Clay,) are reaping the just reward of its perversion, that "policy is the best honesty." Henry Clay was about as much mistaken when he chose the side of opposition to the annexation of Texas, as he was when he voted for John Q. Adams.

The editor of a Clay whig paper in Kentucky calls upon his friends in Tennessee, to send him pamphlets, documents, and papers to enable him to show up the political opinions and character of James K. Polk; he however closes with a special invitation to his friend Brownlow, and requests him to act as a "special committee" for that purpose. This shows the real object of the editor—slander and defamation, and he has certainly chosen the right committee for that purpose. Truly spurious Clay whiggery must be hard run in Kentucky to call upon Brownlow for help.

It is truly amusing to see the different modes resorted to by the Clay whigs to hide their disappointment and alarm at the nomination of James K. Polk. Some of them try to do so by vain boasting, some affect to treat his claims with contempt, and some pretend to be very sorry that he has been nominated, because as they say, they will now have no race at all. But there are a few, a very few, who possessed of more candor and honesty than the rest, tell their whig friends plainly, not to deceive themselves, that they have no common enemy to encounter, and that it will require all their energy strength and vigilance to secure a triumph.

That string will soon wear out.—The whig papers appear totally at a loss for any thing to say in disparagement of Gov. Polk, except the continual repetition of a fact, of which the people are already well aware, that he has been beaten for Governor. But while they are so industriously engaged in sawing upon this single string, it is a pity, but they could go back a little further, and lest we should unfortunately forget it, remind us also, that he was once elected Governor—that he sunk their 20,000, and spiked their great whig Cannon to the tune of 2,000 majority. This would afford us a little of the "spice of life" and might tend greatly to the preservation of "that same string." But if being defeated in an election be any disqualification for office according to "which principles," it might not be amiss to refresh their recollection by a reference to the defeats of some of their own candidates. Without descending to particulars, we shall at present only remind them of two prominent instances. Gen. Harrison their former candidate was not only beaten for the office of Governor, but also for a seat in the State Legislature. Henry Clay, their present candidate and "great embodiment of whig principles" has been three times rejected by the people.

But is it not strange that a party so fruitful of inventions in 1840, should be so suddenly brought to a dead halt. What has become of their army humbug, free negro suffrage and gold spoons? Perhaps if they cannot bring foul charges against the democratic candidate, they could again regale us with fair promises of "two dollars a day and roast beef," or at least tell us, they "stoop to conquer."

MR. CLAY AND TEXAS.—The Texas question is turning the tide against Mr. Clay. His uncompromising opposition to annexation, now or hereafter, will, it is thought, deprive him even of the vote of Kentucky.

It is said he was in no very good humor when he left Washington. He complained that his Whig friends in the South had deceived him, in not attaching due importance to the question. They had written as he did write, and that they would follow him. But they were wrong. A storm has been raised which again sweep him into the regions of popular repudiation and neglect. Many of the most distinguished Whigs of Kentucky, and among them the Hon. Thomas Marshall, are out in the hustings in favor of annexation. N. Y. Plebeian.

COON SONGS AT A DISCOUNT.

It has been remarked that the nomination of Mr. Polk is a serious annoyance to Coonism in various ways, and particularly as regards the Clay Songsters, and the rest of the books with a "valler kiver," all of which were prepared with an especial reference to Mr. Van Buren's nomination, and are useless as the case now stands; so that the artillery is spiked. The Washington spectator, in alluding to this subject, speaks of the matter as follows:

"Mr. Polk's nomination has deprived them of the benefit of a hundred tons of documents, more or less, which they have been for months preparing, franking, & packing up, upon the supposition that Mr. Van Buren would be nominated. What a mass of fabrication, fraud, and falsehood, will thus be rendered impotent! Their perverted notions and lies; their garbled and false statements; their hideous caricatures and electioneering speeches; their thousand songs and ballads, meant for Mr. Van Buren, are all in vain! They must follow the advice of their illustrious leader, the great Coon Hunter, 'pick the flint, and try it again!'"

THE WHIGS REFUSE TO PREVENT PIPE-LAYING.

Mr. Berrien, the chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, has reported the bill from the H. of Representatives which provides for holding the presidential election on the same day in all the States, with an amendment, which postpones its operation till after the next election.

This is certainly a remarkable piece of frankness; for while it plainly acknowledges that this bill is required, to prevent frauds on the elective franchise, it postpones correcting the evil, so as to give Mr. Clay the benefit of it in the coming election. This is unquestionably the real motive of the amendment; and it cannot be disguised. The most enormous frauds have been judicially proved to have been practised by the whig party upon the democratic party—frauds which go to destroy the very foundations of our government—popular sovereignty; and which the democrats, in a body, allege gave the whigs a coon in 1840. The democratic house of Representatives pass a bill to prevent a repetition of these frauds, and the whig Senate postpones its operation till after another presidential election. Can any honest mind resist the conclusion that the whigs of the Senate know the advantages they have heretofore derived from the frauds complained of, and that they do not intend to give them up till after another election, which, if they carry, will enable them to substitute the power of a bank of the United States over the people or the frauds they must now resort to upon their suffrages?—Globe.

LETTER FROM GEN. JACKSON.

We have been furnished with a copy of the correspondence between Gen. Jackson and a committee on the part of the citizens of Murfreesborough, inviting the General to the mass meeting to be held at that place on Wednesday next, and take pleasure in laying before our readers the letter of Gen. Jackson, who, it will be seen, enters with enthusiasm and zeal into the movement of our citizens in favor of the annexation of Texas and the occupation of Oregon.

Nashville, Tenn.

HERMITAGE, June 15, 1841.
Gentlemen:—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 10th inst., inviting me to the mass meeting proposed at Murfreesborough, on Wednesday next, for the purpose of confirming the nominations recently made at Baltimore by the delegates of the democratic party.

Although the state of my health will not allow me to be one of your number, on that occasion, I enter, with all my heart, into the objects of the meeting.

Never, gentlemen, had we more reason to felicitate ourselves upon the auspicious prospect which now presents the old republicans to the field. Instead of disorder and confusion produced by differences of opinion respecting the relative claims of the distinguished individuals who were balloted for at the Convention, what to we witness? Unanimity without a parallel. Rising above all selfish feeling, these individuals, themselves, nobly withdrew their names from the list of candidates, and united in the nomination of Messrs. Polk & Dallas; two gentlemen thoroughly known to them, as having the highest qualifications of character and talent, and possessing, in an eminent degree, the confidence of their fellow citizens.

A party that can give such a practical proof of its capacity to harmonize, and of its ability, in the pursuit of principle to bury all differences about men, cannot fail of success.

I agree with you, gentlemen, in characterizing, as you have done, the annexation of Texas to our Union, and the occupation of Oregon, as American questions. Our Union is not safe as long as Great Britain can be encouraged in her designs upon these territories. Let us, therefore, rally with patriotic and national zeal under the flags upheld by Polk and Dallas. If they are successful, Texas and Oregon will be ours; if they are defeated, British influence, under the pretence of abolishing slavery, will be interfering with our rights, and it will never cease, as long as our glorious system of government is a successful proof that monarchy is not necessary to secure the happiness of man. I am, very respectfully,

ANDREW JACKSON.
Messrs. W. G. REEVES and others, Committee.

METHODIST GENERAL CONFERENCE.
ANDREW JACKSON.—From the work Commercial, we obtain the following synopsis of the proceedings.

Monday Morning, June 1.
Bishop Hedden, presided by the Bishops yesterday. He had signed it as a peace measure, but found it was not.

After some debate, the vote was taken on a substitute to the proposition of the Bishop, offered by Mr. Finley, which was, in substance, that Bishop Andrew having become connected with slavery by marriage, &c., and as it was calculated to embarrass him in the exercise of his office, therefore he is requested to refrain from the exercise of his office, whilst this impediment remains.

The resolution, by a vote of 110 to 68, was passed, and the question so far is decided.—The southern delegates proposed entering a strong protest against the decision, and were holding a consultation upon their present position and future course on Saturday afternoon.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, to-day, several memorials—some from Philadelphia, relative to a change in the naturalization law, and others from various other places, relative to the annexation of Texas—were received. Mr. Bagby offered the resolutions of which he had given notice some months back, in reference to the Massachusetts resolution, (invoking a change in the constitution in favor of free negro suffrage,) and declaratory as the solemn judgment of the Senate, that the constitution ought not to be amended as required by the resolutions of the legislature of Massachusetts. They lie over for consideration till Monday.

The House bill making appropriations for the civil and diplomatic services, was read twice, and referred to the Committee on Finance. The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of executive business; and, after continuing in secret session till 9 o'clock, p. m., in debate on the treaty to annex Texas to the United States, came to a direct vote on the question of ratification and it was decided in the negative—yeas 16, nays 35, as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Atchison, Bagby, Breese, Buchanan, Calhoun, Fulton, Hayward, Henderson, Hunter, Lewis, McDaniel, Semple, South, Sturgeon, Walker, and Woodbury—16.

NAYS—Messrs. Allen, Archer, Atherton, Barrow, Bates, Bayard, Berrien, Choate, Clayton, Crittenden, Dayton, Davis, Fox, Frick, Francis, Hamilton, Jarnagin, Johnson, Mangum, Merrick, Miller, Morehead, Niles, Pennington, Phelps, Porter, Rivers, Sumner, Tallmadge, Tappan, Upham, White, Woodbridge, and Wright—35.

The injunction of secrecy was then removed, and the Senate adjourned.—Globe.

From the Globe.
New York, June 1, 1841.

This is a day, the like of which has not been seen since the day of the democracy for years. I have watched for a few moments (for the purpose of dropping you a few lines) from one of the high seats, most enthusiastic, and exciting political assembly I ever attended, called together for the purpose of ratifying the nominations made at Baltimore for President and Vice President of the United States. In view of numbers, it exceeds any assembly meeting of 1840 that I witnessed; and for unanimity, harmony, and enthusiasm, it exceeds the power of pen to describe. But one feeling appears to animate the democracy; and one thought appears to govern their action; but one hope rests upon them on duty—the almost certain hope of success in the coming contest. Thirty or forty thousand sturdy democrats are assembled in the Park at 5 o'clock, p. m., to rally the dings of the national convention and their firm, consistent, and unflinching democrat, Campbell P. White, was called upon to preside. He was assisted by 21 vice-presidents—forming altogether an array of democratic talent seldom equaled.

A standing about fifty feet in length, and about twenty-five wide, was erected in front of the City Hall to accommodate the officers, musicians, speakers, &c. This was decorated with flags, representing every State in the Union, together with the "stars of Texas." It was also surrounded by portraits of Jefferson, Jackson, Van Buren, and the President that is to be, James K. Polk—each with flags and banners of all the Van Buren associations, the Calhoun associations, Johnson and Stewart associations—forming, altogether, surrounded as the whole was by the upturned faces of countless thousands, one of the most exciting and spirit-stirring scenes I ever witnessed.

The Hon. Benjamin F. Butler led off in one of the most splendid political speeches that ever fell from his lips. He seemed to feel what he said, and the effect upon the vast assemblage present was happy in the extreme. His motto was "union, harmony, concord—everything for the cause, nothing for men." Ganz went Mr. Melville, esq., next addressed the meeting. Before commencing his speech, however, he read a letter from Mr. Van Buren, the very announcement of which brought forth a shout which seemed to round the very heavens. As Mr. Melville proceeded with the reading, all was hushed in silence; scarce a whisper was heard; and as every word and expression of the ex-President showed the dignity of his character, and love of democratic principles, and also his full and entire acquiescence in the nominations made, the people could scarce contain themselves, and their enthusiasm broke out in wild and joyous shouts for VAN BUREN and DEMOCRACY—POLK, DALLAS, and VICTORY.

At this, Mr. Melville was followed by that unchanging democrat, and friend of Van Buren, Churchill C. Campbell, and his wife.

Several other addresses were given by gentlemen from abroad. Those names I did not learn, but you will find them in the more detailed accounts in the papers of to-morrow. A procession was finally formed, and marched through some of the principal streets, extending to near three miles in length, and returned to Tammany Hall, which was splendidly illuminated from basement to attic. (six stories.)

The multitude, at this present writing, in front of Tammany, is truly immense, filling up the entire large space from the Brick Church to the Hall of Records, and speakers are addressing the assembled multitude from different points.

Truly, this is a day of excitement and joy for every democrat. You will recollect that, when the federal whigs held their ratification meeting a few weeks ago, in the same place, a terrific thunder storm dispersed and scattered them in all directions, even driving some of the gentry into Tammany Hall. But how different the scene—how auspicious has this day been! During the whole day clouds and vapors hung over the city, and all predicted a storm before night; but the instant the meeting was called to order, 5 o'clock, the lowering clouds broke away, and the sun shone in more than usual splendor and magnificence, lighting up the scene all around, and giving joy and hope to all present. And thus he continued to shine upon our acts and doings, until he finally sunk to rest behind the green hills of the West, to rise equally brilliant and glorious, on some future morning, on the complete and glorious victory of the democracy.

LEYDARD.

Extract from a letter, dated

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 5, 1841.

GENTLEMEN: No possible nominations could have given more universal or hearty satisfaction than those made at the democratic national convention during the last week, especially to the democracy of this portion of Pennsylvania. The moment the intelligence was received here, smiles lit up the countenances of the stern democrats, and a joyful response broke from their lips. We completely stole the Clay thunder, and last night we gave them the storm. On very short notice, about one thousand of the democracy of the borough and surrounding townships assembled in the county court room, which was packed to excess.

A recent trip through the eastern counties of our State satisfies me that our democrats will go to the polls as one man; and I have the first man yet to meet who claims to call himself such, who will not vote the ticket, and nothing but the ticket; and so we say all.

All of the late Tyler party were at our meeting; and his press here does not hoist his name. We shall give the coons a delightful dressing in the fall.

The law requiring the electoral elections to be held uniformly should be passed. It will prevent rascality, and aid our party greatly, especially in the large cities.

Extract from a letter, dated

BLUE BELL, (Penn.) June 5, 1841.

Dear sir: I expect to leave Pennsylvania in a few days, to be absent some time; I feel so great an interest in the welfare of this Commonwealth and it is repulsive, that I feel it my duty, as a pioneer of old Montgomery, to send you a hearty response for Polk and Dallas.

I please to inform your friends at Washington that all is well here; and I confess I never saw better feeling. Every heart is united, and every voice is proclaiming the glad tidings of harmony and union.

The enthusiasm has been like magic in our ranks; and dismay is fairly written upon every whig countenance. We are sanguine, from the evidence already made manifest by the people since the joyful news arrived, that all the elements of discord were buried, and a phoenix of patriotic sacrifice has arisen from the ashes. I therefore boldly assert that Pennsylvania is safe with an increase of 10,000 majority; and old Montgomery of 400 more than either could possibly have obtained, had not this reconciliation taken place; and if the same result should manifest itself throughout this great confederacy, the temple of liberty will not get a scar, and the demons that threatened the destruction of every principle dear to a patriotic heart, will meet with a total overthrow; and the immortal principles of Jefferson and Jackson will blaze with brighter glory than ever in the cloudless horizon.

P. S. The Clay minstrel is Polk'd into confusion, and their labor is lost in preparing to defame the democratic nominees in advance.

Correspondence of the Boston Post.
NASHUA, June 4th, 1841.

Please inform the democracy of Boston that, on the receipt of intelligence of the nomination of Polk and Dallas, one hundred guns were fired by the democracy of this town; and last night an overwhelming and enthusiastic meeting was held, and addressed by his excellency ex-Governor Hubbard and the Hon. Charles F. Gove, when the nomination of "Young Hickory" and Dallas was hailed by hearty and prolonged cheers by the assembled multitude.

"OUR DANGER IS PAST."—So writes the editor of the Petersburg Republican, and adds: "The nominees are faithful and true standard-bearers in the Republican cause, men whose devotion to it is surpassed by none, men around whom we may rally with confidence, and in whose patriotism and ability we may rely with safety."

MESSRS. POLK AND DALLAS.—The nomination of these gentlemen by the Baltimore convention as the democratic candidates for President and Vice President, has, as far as heard from, been everywhere received with an enthusiasm which may be regarded as the sure harbinger of success. Harrisburg Argus.

The sagacious editor of the New York and it has this observation: "The sagacious editor of the New York Argus, in his editorial of the 25th inst., speaks of the nomination of Polk and Dallas, that all the dissension and disturbances which have agitated that party for the last two years will be completely lulled in a few weeks; and that they will present a more united front, and a more determined spirit than any one had reason to expect; and in this particular they seem to be occupying very much the same position as did the whigs in 1840, who presented the same differences of opinion, and the same astonishment on the nomination of General Harrison, which was so quickly succeeded by unexampled unanimity of feeling."

From the Albany Argus.
THE DEMOCRATIC SPIRIT.—Nothing can exceed the spirit and tone with which the national nominations are everywhere received. A noble emulation pervades the democratic ranks; and we look for an enthusiastic rally in this State, and throughout the Union, that will sweep before it the bank candidate, his coon emblems, and all the devices of federalism.

NORTHEAST NEW YORK.—We have the following from an able democrat, dated at Plattsburg:

The intelligence of the nomination at Baltimore seems to have flown on the wings of the wind, as it had preceded me in every place through which I passed. Nothing can exceed the cordial and enthusiastic reception which it meets among our friends in the northern part of the State. If I had fears that a temporary feeling of disappointment in not having Mr. Van Buren (so greatly and deservedly admired here) for our candidate, I dismissed them, for all our friends who have met, and they have been many, with one voice say that Polk and Dallas we can bring out a strong, united and triumphant vote in all this region.

THE RIVER COUNTIES.—At Poughkeepsie the democrats fired a national salute on Friday, and rang a merry peal with the bells, which (says the Telegraph) sounded dolefully to the whigs.

At Newburgh a salute of one hundred guns was fired on Monday evening, and a large meeting held in front of the United States Hotel. The response to the nominations of Polk and Dallas was enthusiastic. The meeting was addressed by John Van Buren, esq., of Kingston, W. A. McCurray, esq., of New York, and by Messrs. Jonell and Reeves of Newburgh. A letter from an efficient democrat of that place says:

"The tone here is strong and irresistible in favor of Polk and Dallas; and old Orange, whatever may be the local divisions, will show a good account at the ballot-boxes."

WESTERN NEW YORK.—The democrats of Palmyra testified their approval of the democratic national nomination by a salute of 26 guns.

"The ticket (says the Wayne Sentinel) is a most excellent one, and it will call out in its support an enthusiastic rally of the entire strength of the American democracy."

ANOTHER WHIG PLOT EXPOSED.

One of the whig candidates for elector in the State of Illinois, named S. Lisle Smith, who resides at Chicago, has written a confidential letter to a whig friend, dated the 25th March, 1841, which has found its way into the public prints, and from which we take the following complimentary extract in relation to the sons of the "Emerald Isle," and also to the abolitionists:—Globe.

"Everything looks favorable. The meeting of our club last Thursday was most enthusiastic. Hundreds could not get in. I send you a copy of our proceedings. We are managing closely to disaffect the Irish, and get them to vote the abolition ticket. I am pushing up the abolitionists all the time; and they are making converts from the ranks of the enemy. I think two to one are drawn from the localities. I doubt not that when Father Mathew visits this section of the country, which he has promised to do, an immense change will be effected. A bull from the Pope is also expected. Many of the whig abolitionists, who have always been Clay whigs, will vote for us; and I assure you the north will do her duty. I shall not start on the canvass until after the nomination, and then I will do nothing else till November."

GETTING ALARMED.—Some of the whig papers affect to be unconcerned in regard to the democratic nomination while others are becoming greatly alarmed.

Hear what Mr. Clay's organ in New Orleans, the Tropic, says in regard to the "signs of the times"—Union.

It becomes our duty, then, to proclaim, that "order reigns in Warsaw"—that the dissensions in the locofoco ranks are healed—that harmony is thoroughly restored—that the skies are once more bright, and that the whigs may as well address themselves to the work before them with proper grace and spirit, for they have no common foe to encounter. They will be compelled to exercise all their energy, all their industry, all their strength, and all their vigilance, in order to secure a triumph.

CLAY AND FREELINGHUYSEN.—The Treponton, N. J. Emporium, remarking upon the association of the names of these individuals upon the same ticket, says—

"We will sometime soon give the proceedings of the meeting held in the Presbyterian Church, at Newark, immediately after the number of poor Clays, in which Mr. Frelinghuyesen denounced the conduct of Mr. Clay, and charged him as accessory to the murder."

CHARACTER OF MR. CLAY.—We subjoin the character of the whig candidate, as given by some of the most distinguished men of our country, and commend it to the attention of those man-worshippers who hold him up as a being little less than a god.

JACKSON'S OPINION OF MR. CLAY.—"I do not know how to do it, when he ascends from his high place in the Senate, and roams about the country retailing slander upon the living and the dead."

WEBSTER'S OPINION OF MR. CLAY.—"Henry Clay has too many heresies about him ever to gain my support."

JEFFERSON'S OPINION OF MR. CLAY.—"Henry Clay," said Mr. Jefferson, is merely a splendid orator, without any valuable knowledge from experience or study, or determined political principles, founded in political science, either practical or theoretical."

HARRISON'S OPINION OF MR. CLAY.—"I will do my duty, even if Mr. Clay is to be benefited by it, from whom I have experienced only ungenerous treatment, in requital for years of devoted service."

RANDOLPH'S OPINION OF MR. CLAY.—"He is talented, but corrupt. He stinks and shines and shines and stinks, like a rotten mackerel by moon light."

OUR NOMINATIONS.

There never has been an evidence of harmony, unanimity and enthusiasm more complete, more satisfactory or more universal than that which the late Democratic nomination at Baltimore has elicited from every part of the country, from Maine to Louisiana. From every quarter accounts of public meetings are pouring in upon us, of the most enthusiastic character, full of the hope, the confidence and the certainty of our coming victory in November next. The Whig papers are evidently beginning to feel alarmed; they are trying hard to persuade themselves and their readers that there is no enthusiasm among us—that our perfect failures, gentlemen like you, begin to do. You will find out before long whether our meetings are failures or not. The New York Herald began that time at first, but has changed it considerably in the last week. The real fact is, these papers are already scared, and like the little boy in the dark, are trying to whistle their courage up, but they can't do it. The news is obvious. They know well that the Democracy, once united, are invincible, and if they still pretend to doubt it, we will prove it to their dissatisfaction in November, by a defeat as great and as memorable as that which Old Hickory gave their friend and faithful co-worker, John Q. Adams, the Abolitionist. No doubt, Johnny Q. and his abolition friends will do their best to aid Henry Clay against Texas now, as Henry Clay did Johnny Q. in 1828. But we beat them both in 1828, and please God we'll do it again in 1844. Keep cool gentlemen, and stick to the truth, and don't let your temper get the better of your discretion.

Post Office Bill.—The following is an abstract of a portion of the Post Office Bill reported to the House of Representatives on Friday. It is understood that it has the sanction of the Post Master General, so that it will stand better chance than that of Merriam's.

For any letter of a single sheet for a distance not exceeding 150 miles, 10 cents; over 150, and not exceeding 400 miles, 15 cents; over 400 miles, 25 cents; and for every letter or package composed of two pieces of paper, or other article or thing, double these rates, etc.

After October next, the postage on newspapers to be as follows:—For every paper of more than 1000 superficial inches, for 30 miles, one half cent; over 30, and not exceeding 150 miles, or to any post office in the same state, and over the paper is printed, one cent; and over 150 miles one and a half cents. For every newspaper of more than 1,000, and not exceeding 1,250 square inches, an additional quarter of a cent, with an additional quarter of a cent for each additional 250 or part of 250 superficial square inches.

Publishers may send their papers by conveyances other than those which carry the mail, and privilege may be granted by the Post Master General, for the carriage of newspapers out of the mail, on payment of one half the foregoing rate of postage.

More truth than poetry. An exchange paper says, Philadelphia is the Whig Banner city of the Union, gives the largest Whig majority of any city in the Union, is the headquarters of speculation and bank infidelity, has the most dissipated set of men, the most frequent mobs and riots, has sunk more bank capital, and robbed more widows and orphans, owes the largest debt, and cares less about it; has originated and consummated more election frauds; pretends to be most tolerant, yet mobs Abolitionists, shoots Catholics, and burns churches, boasts of its superior military, and yet cannot quell a riot; verily, Philadelphia is the Banner city of Whiggery, for there are its principles most fully carried out.

AN ANECDOTE.—On Wednesday, after the nomination of Mr. Polk, Mr. McNulty, a delegate from Ohio, and present Clerk to the House of Representatives arose, with a very grave air, and charged upon the convention a fraud—aye, an ardent fraud. (Members began to prick up their ears with astonishment.) Yes, he told them, a fraud; because the Whigs had wasted at least $50,000 in printing all the old knittings of the 200,000 Standing Army—and negro evidence—and the gold spoons, &c., &c.—which were now prepared for immediate distribution—and here had this convention come forward to cheat them of their valuable property, by making it lumber and waste paper—leather and prunella," upon their hands. Was this right? Was it treating the coons decently and fairly? Lt. Governor Dickinson of New York, (a gentleman of much good humor and good sense,) immediately rose, and gravely moved, that the Whigs be reimbursed out of the surplus profits of the Bank of the United States.

OPENING OF THE CAMPAIGN AT NASHVILLE.

On the night that we received intelligence for the Presidency, we had the pleasure of brilliantly illuminating the "Old Citadel," and giving to the breeze our Star Banners.

On the day following, our good friends brought out the big gun, when a NATIONAL SALUTE, a round for Polk and Dallas, and another for Texas were handsomely fired by a company of citizens under the direction of Mr. Conley; one of Gen. Jackson's old soldiers. Meantime, the shrill file and spirit-stirring drum were joined in martial melody along the streets, to the tune of "Get out the way Ole Kentucky."

Accompanied by our new national banner, on which the ladies—Heaven bless their patriotic hearts—have beautifully embroidered the "long star" in its present sphere, as though it was longing for admission into an glorious Union.

A call having been made for a GENERAL GATHERING in the Court House yard on that evening, we repaired to the spot at the hour designated, where arrangements had been made for public addresses on the occasion. After a large concourse had assembled, Mr. J. Geo. HARRISON took the stand, and submitted the following resolutions responsive to the Presidential nominations.

Resolved, That we hail with enthusiastic joy, the nomination of JAMES K. POLK of Tennessee, for President, and GEORGE M. DALLAS, of Pa., for Vice President of the United States.

Resolved, That the thanks of this meeting be accorded to the members of the late Democratic National Convention, as held at Baltimore on the 27th ultimo, for prudence and wisdom which characterized their deliberations, resulting in a cordial union upon the nomination of these distinguished American Statesmen.

Resolved, That while we would hail with confidence and strength in favor any other good and true republican that might have been selected for the first office, our union will be closer and more perfect, and our resolves to persevere deeper and more effective, in consequence of the nomination having fallen on Tennessee's FAVORITE SON.

Resolved, That we are for the IMMEDIATE ANNEXATION OF TEXAS TO THE TERRITORY OF THE UNITED STATES, as a measure to restore our ancient boundaries, to redeem the solemn pledge made to Texas under the treaty of 1823, to prevent the increasing usage of "neighbors, and in the language of the veteran and of the language, "TO EXTEND THE AREA OF FREEDOM."

In obedience to the call of the multitude,

Mr. Andrew BAXTER rose and addressed them in a thrilling and powerful manner, proudly exulting at the distinguished consideration awarded the State of Tennessee at the hands of the democratic republican party, by unanimously nominating for the Chief Magistracy of the nation our distinguished fellow citizen, JAMES K. POLK. He congratulated the three millions on the harmony that now prevailed throughout their ranks, happily availing of the bright prospect before us, and declaring that the many different struggles for principle in which the prominent men of this State have been successfully engaged since the formation of the government are a good guarantee that our new Presidential champion shall lead us to victory. He was followed by

Mr. A. O. P. NICHOLS, who had been repeatedly called for, and greeted to the stand with shouts of applause. Mr. N. said he was not of a very sanguine temperament, but he must confess that on this occasion, he was utterly unable to repress the enthusiasm which he felt in obeying the call that had been made upon him. James K. Polk was an old neighbor of his—an associate, with whom, in the county of Maury, he had fought shoulder to shoulder for many a year. From his own youth he had known him well, intimately, a confident, understanding, therefore, of his transcendent merits, not only as a statesman, but as a private citizen. He instituted a striking comparison between Mr. Polk and Mr. Clay in point of public and known private character, by which the latter fared badly. He declared it as his opinion that no statesman of the country had a more unblemished private reputation than Mr. Polk; that no one was worthier of the high trusts devolving on the Executive, or would more effectually unite the republicans in the approaching struggle. He said, that for himself, the question of annexation was, in this contest, paramount to all others, absorbing all minor considerations; and that he was for "Polk and Dallas—Texas and democracy," as the sign by which we cannot fail to conquer. He ridiculed in a happy vein, the inquiry that had been mooted in one of the Whig newspapers, "who is Jas. K. Polk?"—thought it passing strange that so old a citizen of Nashville as the inquirer should at once forget there was such a man in this State as JAMES K. POLK. Instead of answering question so idle, he would refer the inquirer to the polls of next November if he will look there (said Mr. N.) he will then learn that James K. Polk is President of the United States! After an eloquent appeal to the multitude, he was heartily cheered as he made way for

Mr. W. H. HUMPHREYS, who was loudly called for and enthusiastically received. Mr. H. went into a close and thorough investigation of the principal facts involved in the question of annexation, with a view of showing that the position occupied by Mr. Polk on this question was not only of itself correct, but was the same as that which to his own certain knowledge, all parties occupied in the west a few weeks ago, and especially in the western division of this State. He exposed the fallacy of Mr. Clay's reasoning on the subject, and appealed with force and effect to the ties of country, religion, sympathy, and consanguinity, together with an identity of interest, by which we bound to make common cause with the great work of republicanism, and setting forth to the oppressed of the earth a brilliant example of Government based on the popular Sovereignty. He was cordially applauded throughout, and upon his leaving the stage there was loud cries for

Mr. H. A. TURNER, one of the at large, who succeeded in the crowd, numbering many of the reasons why Tennessee should vote at the prospect now before us, highly and happily enlarging our illustrious neighbor and fellow citizen, James K. Polk, as the able and eloquent champion who shall lead us to victory; discoursing at length on the incomparable importance which now attaches to the question of annexation. He alluded to the fact, that in all probability, Mr. Van Buren would have been nominated for re-election but for his unsatisfactory sentiments on this all absorbing national question; and insisted that the very circumstance of his being dropped a candidate so much belated by the democratic party at large, was conclusive of a fixed determination of the democratic party to FOLLOW THE PATH OF PRINCIPLE WHEREVER IT LEADS. In conclusion he said he had been selected as an elector at large to discuss the issues before the people, in the opening campaign, and was now going forth to meet his opponent. He expected many a conflict, and was prepared for them; and fellow citizens, (said he) with "POLK, DALLAS, and TEXAS" for my shibboleth, I shall be in front of mine if the danger is not looked out of the Tennessee River before next November. After the applause had subsided,

Mr. SMITH, of Mississippi, having been called for, made a powerful appeal on behalf of "Polk and Dallas—Texas and the Constitution," which elicited hearty cheers at the turn of every successive period. He said he was a native of Tennessee, as were also, many thousands of Mississippians; but they had all emigrated to their new home, in the sunny south, the smiling equatorial climes, with which their young minds were imbued in the Hickory State; that they felt a deep and abiding interest in the success of these principles in their native State, not less than in the State of their adoption; and that an ardent response to the public nomination of Polk and Dallas was a duty very near, going forth from the citizens of Mississippi in their local gatherings assembled. In conclusion, he said he would venture to paraphrase a sentiment of the "Globe," and give "POLK and DALLAS, TEXAS AND THE CONSTITUTION, NOW AND FOREVER, ONE AND INSEPARABLE!" He retired amid cries of "go on, go on!" when a popular call.

Mr. L. P. CHEATHAM took the stand, and made a very impressive speech on the questions at issue, congratulating the fellow citizens on the new and promising aspect that illumines the path of the democratic republican cause, in consequence of the nomination of James K. Polk to the Presidency. He discussed the merits of the proposition to annex Texas to the Union, and alluding to the fact that the nomination of Mr. Clay was a result of the democratic party of Tennessee to rally at this moment with new courage, new zeal, new hope, to be early and late in the field, until the common shall glow only with the triumphant election to the high offices in the people's gift of Tennessee's favorite son. After he had concluded, the crowd, after giving us a prolonged shout, called for Mr. J. J. STERN, "OTHER HARTY CHEERS FOR POLK AND DALLAS!"

It is proper that we should here mention, as a part of the interesting exercises of the evening, the splendid fireworks that were exhibited at the gate of the courthouse yard, under the direction of Mr. Madison. Among the representations was a bright and beautiful revolving train of some magnitude, which caused a suspension of the speaking for the time, and elicited cheers for the long star, now rising in the ascendant.

Thus have we briefly chronicled some of the interesting incidents that mark the opening of the Presidential campaign in Nashville, and but for the large concourse of available space thus occupied, we would have had an appeal to the "POLK and DALLAS" and "TEXAS AND THE CONSTITUTION" to rally to the RESCUE. That pleasure, however, is reserved for another day.

AN OVERFLOW.—The Alexandria (La.) publisher of the 18th ult., gives the particulars of the almost entire overflow of that

The large and splendid mansion of the Mills, built upon the model of the Parthenon, was swept entirely away, together with a box containing treasure of valuable papers. The new and sufficient market house, and the church on Pearl street, were in imminent danger. Maj. Duress, one of the most respectable citizens of Alexandria, was drowned. It was said that the loss of the planting interest on the river could not be less than a million and a half of dollars.

THE NOMINATION OF MR. DALLAS—HOW IT WAS ANNOUNCED.

The news of the nomination of Geo. M. Dallas was conveyed to that gentleman in a singular manner, and merits a notice. It was arranged to be announced to him by the Eastern delegation on their way home from the convention. Accompanied by Senator Walker, of Mississippi, a personal friend of Mr. Dallas, the delegates, 60 in number, arrived in this city on Friday morning about half past five o'clock.—Of course almost everybody was yet asleep.—The party soon reached Mr. D.'s house in Walnut, below Tenth street, and Mr. Walker, ascending the steps, rang the bell. After a pause, Mrs. D. put her head out of the window, and seeing Mr. Walker, conjectured that some misfortune had happened to her daughter, resident in Washington, Mr. Walker's remark, "I wish to see Mr. Dallas immediately," confirmed her suspicions, and she hastily awakened her husband, communicating the sad conjectures. He ran down stairs half dressed and barefooted—opened the door—when to his utter amazement, in walked sixty or more gentlemen, twenty two, with the tread of soldiers, passing him by and entering his front parlor as though to make him a captive. Not having the slightest conception of their object, he stood thunder-struck at the scene. Mr. Walker led him into the back parlor. "My dear Walker," said he, in amazement, "what is the matter?"—Wait one moment, if you please, Dallas—wait one moment, if you please." The folding doors were then thrown open, and the whole delegation stepped forward, gave three deafening cheers for "Polk and Dallas!" Mr. D. stood paralyzed.—Mr. Walker enjoyed his discomfiture. Governor Fairfield, of Maine then stepped forward, and in the name of the delegation, solved the mystery in the following brief speech:

"Mr. Dallas, I have the honor to inform you that the National Convention of Democrats assembled at Baltimore, having entered the conference in the purity of your private character, and the distinguished services you have rendered to the Democratic party, have unanimously conferred upon you the nomination of Vice President of the United States. Unsolicited on your part and unexpected as it no doubt is, we are authorized to announce to you that the people of the United States in Democratic Convention assembled, have thus selected one whom the Democracy of the Keystone State have ever cherished as a faithful and tried son. The name of Dallas is the only pledge which the Democracy of the Union need require, for the uprightness of your course, the purity of your principles, and your faithful adherence to the cause of Democracy."

Mr. Dallas, having by this time collected himself, made a very short speech. He said: "I feel honored on behalf of the Keystone State in this nomination. If the party ask it, I must yield all private and personal considerations to their wishes—especially as it was unsolicited and unsought." Mr. Walker and several of the delegates then spoke, after which they gave 36 cheers for Polk, Dallas, Buchanan and Texas. Clear after cheer was then given for the nomination which effectually awakened not only the family, but all the neighborhood, the street being by that time alive with a crowd of anxious inquirers. The facts were soon known, and when the delegation departed, three cheers from the crowd greeted them as they went.

Phil. Spirit of the Time.

A writer from Philadelphia to Mr. Ritchie, says, "the National Convention has saved the Democratic party."

"Never have I seen such enthusiasm and confidence as now pervade our ranks. We shall make a perfect sweep in the Keystone State, and will carry New Jersey by a decisive majority. I know the politics of both States well, and you may rely upon what I say."

"Polk will receive the united vote of our party."—In addition to all this, we shall recruit largely from the enemy; for the Texas question, in both this State & New Jersey, is the most popular measure I have ever known."

Great Britain, Salt Ana, City.

Now cordially unite.

To keep out Texas—tis, they say,

Unsafe to speak of right."

But hark! the swelling millions shout,

Who dreads their threats and malice?

We'll put the triple tie to route,

With Texas, Polk and Dallas."

OLD WOMEN.

Say what you will, we respect and love old women. There's our next door neighbor, who must be nearly three score years of age, and never idle. At morning's dawn she is up and busy, and never retires until she has accomplished her work. When a neighbor is sick, she is always ready to sooth, by her little kindnesses and manifestations as much interest in his or her welfare, as if a near relative. When the wind howls, she feels for and pities the poor sailor. When a cold north-easter approaches she remembers the poor. In fine, she is always doing good as far as her means will allow. Blessings on the old women. They cannot be dispensed with. May they all live in peace and happiness, and when their work is accomplished, die in composure, to receive the welcome done good and faithful servants.

THE PRINCIPLES WE FOLLOW.

Jefferson lays down the following principles:

"The People—the only source of power."
"The absolute and lasting severance of Church and State."
"The freedom, sovereignty, and independence of the respective States."
"The Union—a confederacy, a compact, neither a consolidation, nor a centralization."
"The Constitution of the Union—a special grant of powers, limited and definite."
"The civil paramount to the military power."
"The Representative to obey instructions of his constituents."
"Elections free, and suffrage universal."
"No hereditary office, nor order, title."
"No taxation beyond the public wants."
"No national debt if possible."
"No costly splendor of administration."
"No proscription of opinion, nor of public discussion."
"No unnecessary interference with individual conduct, property, or speech."
"No favored classes, and no monopolies."
"No public moneys expended, except by warrant or a specific appropriation."
"No mysteries in government inaccessible to the public eye."
"Public compensation for public services, moderate salaries, and strict accountability."

TO THE AFFLICTED.

"Seize upon truth wherever found, On Christian or on heathen ground. Among our friends, among our foes, The plant a divine where'er it grows."

Is the motto of a periodical published in Cincinnati Ohio by A. Curtis, M. D. To all those who believe in the cure of disease by medicine that is congenial to nature, and clear of all poisons, I would say, read Dr. Curtis' paper and you will find it of inestimable value. The writer of these lines was afflicted with one of the most dreadful maladies for ten years during which time he tried some of the most conspicuous gentlemen of the old school (among that number was the celebrated Dr. Smith of Baltimore) without getting relieved. He read the Materia Medica of the old school and gave it his undivided attention for more than two years. After trying so many of the eminent of that profession, was induced to try a system in which he did not believe at the time, that system was Thompsonianism without any tinge, and was cured in six months to his great surprise. It has been about six years since he has been using the vegetable medicine alone, in that time he has had a good chance to know the value of the botanic remedies, and can say of a truth, they are invaluable. Time has been when a Thompsonian was viewed with scorn and thought by many to be unworthy of notice. At which, for men had medicine almost as much under their control as the Roman priest once had professions of religion. By the cures we perform it is gaining ground and appears to be treated with more respect. While we can number such men as Benjamin Waterhouse M. D. L. D. Fellow of the medical society London, and Bath and Manchester, England of the Academy of Arts and Sciences, Belles-lettres, inscriptions and commerce, Marselles; and of the national medical school of France; Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences; of the philosophical society of Philadelphia; and professor of the theory and practice of physic in the University of Cambridge Massachusetts, in the United States of North America, we say we have respectable and profound men in our ranks, and that their names with our illustrious founder will be honored by the afflicted while pain is the common lot of all men.

The writer of this is not trying to gain money or popularity (as in all probability it will be said by the enemies of the Botanic system) but feeling it a duty which he owes to man to point the way which he knows to be right to relieve human misery.

DEMOCRATIC SONG.

Each Whig before his god of Clay,
The dust all prostrate lies in
And hopes to hide his sins away
With pious Frelightingness;
But in the air we'll hang them up
Like Haman on his gallows,
And dash to earth their eager cup,
With our brave "Polk and Dallas."

So let them bawl till they are hoarse,
And swagger round the nation,
But all the pretty girls, of course,
Will go for annexation!
And he who'll not approve their choice,
Must be both cold and callous;
So all ye bold and gallant boys,
Enlist for "Polk and Dallas."

Let "foolporters," like cats-paw tools,
O'er all the country trudge on—
They'll find the people are not fools,
The Democrats no gudgeon;
Tho' "ignorant," with haughty pride,
And "poor" and "weak" they call us,
We'll row them up Salt-River's tide
With our strong "Polk and Dallas."

As now in force we take the field,
They'll find 'twill be no joking,
When with the arms that Freeman wield
We in their ribs are Polk-ing—
Hark! from the vales and mountains where
Each truth-arm'd cohort rallies,
The rousing cry rings on the air,
"Hurrah! for 'Polk and Dallas!'"

SMILE.

MARRIED.—On the 5th inst. in Greenville Dist. South Carolina, by the Rev'd John G. Landrum, Mr. S. P. HUNSON of this place to Miss K. A. daughter of Col. T. P. & Mrs. Mary Brockman of the former place.

For country, home, and a free life,
For justice and for law,
To vote and worship as men please,
With none to overawe.
These are the mottoes of the band
Who go for LIBERTY!
Who here have come from every land,
That they might equal be?

Up! then, your banners to the breeze,
Your station's in the van;
You fight for Heaven's just decrees,
The equal rights of man!
No selfish hopes your hearts inspire,
Nobility's zeal controls;
One free resolve, one proud desire,
Swells high in all your souls!

Up! then, our country must be freed,
From persecution's stains;
Her free-born sons long since decreed,
That here we forge no chains!
No chains to bend the upright mind,
To fetter reason's will!
No chains man's thoughts or hops to bind,
Or his free spirit kill!

Up, Freeman, up!—awake, and save
The through the chains Oppression's hand
Would rattle on your native land,
And shield your country's helpless fame
From deep and everlasting shame.

Up, Freeman, up! the beacon light
From every crag streams clear and bright;
From every plain, and every hill,
The trumpet blast rings free and shrill,
While echoing notes responsive speak
From every crested mountain peak.

Up, Freeman, up!—close up your ranks,
And as a torrent bursts its banks,
Sweep on in serried, stern array,
With hearts on fire to join the fray—
Your battle-cry, so wild and free,
POLK, DALLAS AND DEMOCRACY!

THE DEFENSE.
(who is over the age of 21 years, resides beyond the limits of the State of Alabama, (to-wit:) in the State of Mississippi. It is ordered that publication be made in the Jacksonville Register, for four consecutive weeks, notifying the said Eli M. Driver to appear before the Register at his office in Jacksonville, within 60 days from the date of this order, and plead, answer or demur to Complainant's Bill or the same will be taken pro confesso and set for hearing ex parte.

A copy from the minutes:
W. H. ESTILL, REGISTER.
The Bill charges—that Complainant purchased of Respondent Chilton, a tract of Land known as the south-east fourth of Section 15, Township 15, Range six east in the Coosa Land District, at the price of $2,000.—That Respondent, Chilton, represented that the title to said land was in Resp't Duren, and that a title would be procured from Duren. That Respondent, Driver, claims to have the legal title to said land, so as aforesaid sold by Respondent, Chilton, to Complainant, and that Driver has brought an action against Complainant in the Circuit Court of Benton County, Alabama, to recover possession of said Land of Complainant. That said Respondent Driver ratified the sale by Duren to Chilton and received part of the purchase money. That Chilton is a Bankrupt and unable to respond in damages to Complainant, &c. The bill further charges fraud on the part of Driver, in endeavoring to avoid the sale made by Duren of said land, to Chilton, notwithstanding he received a part of the money on said sale by Duren to Chilton. The bill prays for an injunction as to all the Respondents, who hold the notes of Complainant for the balance of the purchase money—and also to enjoin Driver in his suit at law for the recovery of the land in question, and also for general relief.

WARE-HOUSE AND COMMISSION BUSINESS.
I would respectfully inform my old friends and customers, and the public generally, that I shall again on the 1st of October next, commence the above business, and shall be prepared to advance at any time after this date, either Cash, Bagging and Rope, or Groceries, upon Cotton or Merchandise stored with me. And as I have gone to great expense in building a large Fire-Proof Warehouse, as I trust for the benefit and accommodation of my old friends and patrons, and the public generally, I hope by attending strictly to all business entrusted to my care, I shall receive a liberal share of custom. I would inform those who may have any apprehension from high water, that I am now filling up my yard entirely above high water mark, higher than the water has ever been known to rise.

As I am informed that some of the Warehouse men, are trying to get business by cutting under, (as we call it) I would inform all who have an idea of giving me their business, that I intend to do business as low as any other house.

I have associated my brother A. Hatchett, in the business with me, and we shall do business under the name of W. T. Hatchett, & Bro.

Blanks
OF EVERY DESCRIPTION, FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Thos. Crutchfield, vs. M. M. Houston, es., and

THIS day came the Complainant, by Martin & Earle, his Solicitors, to my satisfaction, that the said M. M. Houston, (26 years of age,) residing in the State of Georgia, therefore, that publication be made in the Jacksonville Republican, a newspaper published in the Town of Jacksonville, for four consecutive weeks, notifying the said Cyrus Choice to appear within 60 days from the date of this order, and plead, answer, or demur to Complainant's bill, or the same will be taken pro confesso and set for hearing ex parte.
May 27th, 1844.
A copy from the minutes:
W. H. ESTILL, Register.

The Bill charges, that Defendant Haynes made two certain Deeds in Trust, the first to John D. Hoke as Trustee, on the 22nd day of February, 1837, the second to Matthew M. Houston, (one of the Defendants,) on the 5th October, 1839, to secure the Complainant in the payment of $2,507 60, with interest from the 24th October, 1839. That the first deed was executed and satisfied on the 1st February, 1840 by the sale of the property it conveyed. And on the same day, (or about that time,) the second deed was executed in part by a sale of a part of the property it conveyed, leaving a large balance of the debt due Complainant from Haynes, still due and unpaid.

That a part of the property conveyed in the said second deed, to-wit: a Negro named Sophy and her child named Charles, and two other children born since the making of the said second deed, the increase of the said Sophy, a large and valuable portion of the household and kitchen furniture and three hundred bushels of corn.—That the said negroes are now in the possession of the said Defendants Francis and Forney—who pretend to hold by virtue of a pretended sale made by virtue of an Execution at law, in favor of the late firm of Choice, Harbin & Co. on the 6th of April, 1840. That the sale was made on the same day the Execution issued—that the judgment on which the execution purported to have issued was paid long before the issuance of the same. That the said sale was void, and the said negroes and the other property are liable to, and are here sought to be made subject to the Complainant's claim.—That the Complainant notified the Trustee to proceed under his authority as Trustee, to subject the said property to the payment of his claim under the deed, which he refused to do.

The Bill prays for an account with M. M. Houston, the Trustee to the second deed—and that he be removed from his Trusteeship and another Trustee be appointed in his place to prosecute this suit and close the said deed in trust, and that the said M. M. Houston be restrained from any further interference with the said trust property as Trustee; and also for general relief.
